2,500 Forms Out, 70% Response

Housing Survey Nears Completion

by WANDALYN RICE
The Elk Grove Village Housing Commission survey designed to measure the need for low and moderate income housing in the village is nearing completion.

Some of the 2,500 questionnaires distributed to workers through industries in the Centex Industrial Park still have not been returned, but as soon as they are turned in the data will be processed, Cathy Duoba, member of the commission, said yesterday.

The information from the questionnaires which were filled out by employees and employers in local industry, will be processed on the computer owned by Harper College, she said.

The questionnaires were distributed and collected by volunteers and have been getting about 70 per cent response, she said.

THE SURVEY was designed to be a random sample of the industries in the village to determine how many persons who work in Elk Grove Village cannot afford to live there because of a lack of moderate-income housing.

The questionnaires must be checked, Mrs. Duoba said, to make sure that even though fewer than 100 per cent return, the selection of industries surveyed is still random.

As soon as the data is processed, she said, the housing commission will call a meeting to discuss the findings.

The housing commission was formed by the village in June of 1970 to study housing needs and advise the village president and board of trustees.

Formation of the commission was recommended by a housing task force formed by former village president Jack Pahl after three Mexican-American children were killed in a fire in Elk Grove Township in November of 1969.

The task force had also called for a professional survey of housing needs in the area, but the commission and village board decided instead to conduct their own survey.

X-Way Traffic Jams Are 'Worse Than Expected'

State highway officials yesterday renewed their pleas for motorists to find alternate routes to the Kennedy and Dan Ryan expressways, on which four-month construction projects have been started.

Traffic jams on both roads were "worse than expected," yesterday morning, according to a spokesman for the Illinois Division of Highways. The spokesman said apparently few commuters heeded advice to avoid the two routes.

Traffic on the Dan Ryan moved "surprisingly well" late yesterday afternoon, according to the Chicago Communications Center of the highway division. Conditions were expected to be worse today as construction activity expands.

The spokesman said southbound traffic moved fairly well on the Kennedy late yesterday afternoon to North Avenue. "When you reach North Avenue, it's like a brick wall," he said.

Westbound traffic on the Kennedy was reported backed up for over a mile at Des Plaines and River Roads late yesterday afternoon.

ART ENGLE, 56, commutes to Elk Grove Village six days a week and lives in Wisconsin. He says he does it because he enjoys "living in God's country" but that there's no money to be made there.

142 Miles Each Day—THAT's Commuting

by TOM JACHIMIEC

At 56, Art Engle is not one to be setting long distance records.

But, he apparently has. Art is a commuter. He has traveled 71 miles to work, 142 miles both ways, six days a week, for the last four years—44,000 miles a year.

He commutes by car, riding from his home in Sharon, Wis., a town of 1,400 on the Illinois-Wisconsin border, to Pre-Finish Metals Inc., 2111 E. Pratt Blvd. in Centex Industrial Park, Elk Grove Village.

"Now. Doesn't bother me," said Art, a mechanic in the maintenance Dept. "I used to work in Franklin Park four years ago 'n that was 10-15 miles further."

ART WAS speaking softly — on a break from his job — and enjoying a slim cigar in the office of his boss, William Lentz of Elk Grove Village, the maintenance supervisor.

His attendance record is "excellent," Lentz said. "It's perfect considering where he lives. Anyway, it's not enough to worry about."

Art said that in the last four years, "I maybe missed three days — not more 'n four. Usually cause o' the weather."

It takes Art about 90 minutes to make the trip one way. Once last winter it took three hours during a snowstorm.

"I used to drive a semi all over the country — just about every state in the union before I got into maintenance," he said.

"BUT, IT'S gettin' so I don't like it anymore," he admitted. "Maybe I shouldn't say that," he added, "but it's gettin' monotonous. Yeah. I guess I'm gettin' old."

Art stays off the tollway ("It's outta my way"), preferring to travel Illinois Routes 62 or 72 northwest to U.S. 31 and west to Sharon.

He usually works the afternoon shift, enabling him to avoid most of the heavy traffic in the Northwest suburbs. Recently, he was working 12-hour days, starting at 7 a.m. and catching the heavy traffic.

With no plans to move closer to his place of employment, he said he hopes to continue commuting "so long as the good Lord lets me."

"It's cheaper in Wisconsin," he said, flicking the ashes from his cigar.

"You can get a three-bedroom apartment for 90 bucks a month 'n a house for 100 bucks a month," he said. "There's nothin' round here for that.

"Besides. That's God's country up there," he added.

The attraction "down here," he said, is money. "It's better down here than up there."

Art's got his own rules of the road to go by when driving.

"STAY AWAY from the other cars if I can."

When he can, Art is in a good position to help motorists in trouble with the citizens band radio in his car. He sometimes alerts authorities of a motorist in trouble.

"I hope to be a ham (radio operator) by November," he said.

Most of his time behind the wheel is spent talking to others with radios.

It's Art's hobby — about the only one he has time for and one he can work at on his way to work.

The time was up for Art. With beads of sweat on his forehead, Art had to go back to work.

It was only 10 a.m. and Art had nine more hours to put in before he could begin his hour and a half drive to Wisconsin and God's country.

$53,334 In Fire Equipment Coming Soon

The Elk Grove Village Fire Department will be getting new equipment soon, Chief Allen Hulett said yesterday.

A bid of $53,334 from Mack Trucks Inc. was submitted for approval last night to the village board of trustees. The bid is for a pumper truck that will be used for the second fire station when it opens in November, Hulett said.

In addition, the department received word last week that an application it had submitted for state funds for a new ambulance had been approved.

The state grant, part of a highway safety project of the Illinois Department of Public Works, provides for $7,750 toward the purchase of a $21,000 ambulance, Hulett said.

THE DEPARTMENT will have to buy an ambulance meeting state and federal specifications, Hulett said, in order to receive the money. He said the proposal to ask for bids on the ambulance will be coming before the village board soon.

The new ambulance, when it is purchased, will replace the Ford station

Report Price Of Gasoline On Upswing

by LEA TONKIN

Measured by the gallons of gasoline sold, or by the number of traffic fatalities, last weekend was a big one for Americans on the move.

The holiday weekend also marked increasing momentum in the upward movement of gasoline prices, according to Herbert Hugo, Midwest bureau chief of Platt's Oilgram, a daily publication of petroleum industry information. He noted that the July 4 and Labor Day weekends are the two biggest of the year for gasoline sales, and often for the number of deaths on the highways.

"There was a general move last week to remove the subsidies, and by the end of the week most suppliers were supporting a pump price of 33.4 cents a gallon," said Hugo. "This is still two cents a gallon below the normal 40.4 cents a gallon price." He noted that this is several cents a gallon higher than the average pump prices a week ago.

SUBSIDIES ARE used by major oil companies (majors) to support the lower prices which are initiated during a gas war. The majors generally pay 70 per cent of the difference between the normal pump price and the lower gas war price; the dealer pays 30 per cent of the loss.

"There will never be one uniform price in a large metropolitan area such as Chicago," said Hugo. "Two majors have not reported any change in their recommended pump prices, and in those cases, their dealers would be supported at lower price levels. Some dealers have even charged higher prices than the supplier recommended."

Hugo said there is no guarantee that the gasoline prices will stabilize at the generally higher levels, since the 1971 market has been characterized by a series of price fluctuations. "It is ridiculous for the price to keep going up and down, because the public begins to think that the dealer and the oil company can make a profit at the lower price level, and when the prices move toward normal levels, they think they are being gouged," Hugo said.

He estimated that at the current average price of 38.4 cents a gallon, the dealer is making six-tenths of a cent less on each gallon of gasoline sold than he would at the normal price level.

This Morning In Brief

The Nation

President Nixon has urged labor and management in the steel industry to write a new wage contract that would not price American steel out of the increasingly competitive world market. Management and Budget Director George Schultz said the President appealed "not only to their economic patriotism but beyond that to their sensitivity to their own self-interests." The present contract expires Aug. 1 and covers 450,000 workers.

Apollo 15 astronauts David B. Scott, Alfred M. Worden and James B. Irwin have started 20 days of launch site isolation in preparation for their flight to the moon July 26. They will, however, be the first moon landing crew that will not have to spend time in quarantine upon returning from the moon.

Louie (Satchmo) Armstrong died at his New York City home just two days after his 71st birthday. The death was unexpected although he had been near death in a hospital a few months ago. The former orphaned waif of the streets of New Orleans went on to become king of the jazz trumpet and won international acclaim.

Teamster sources in Miami Beach say the giant union plans to give imprisoned former president James Hoffa a $75,000 yearly pension and confer upon him the lifetime title of President Emeritus. There were reports, however, that Hoffa has asked for a lump settlement of $1 million. Hoffa resigned all union posts last month to improve his chances for parole from federal prison at Lewisburg, Pa., where he is serving 15 years for mail fraud and jury tampering.

The World

Henry Kissinger, President Nixon's assistant for national security affairs, arrived in India amid elaborate security precautions and demonstrations against American weapon shipments to Pakistan. Kissinger was to spend two days in talks with Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, her top ministers and other Indian leaders. Some of these have made blunt statements about the government's displeasure with the arms shipments to Pakistan.

An Argentine judge has turned an American Navy veteran and his Guatemalan girlfriend over to a five-judge panel to be tried for hijacking a Braniff jetliner from San Antonio, Tex., to Buenos Aires. No date was set for trial, but if convicted, air piracy carries a sentence of from 3 to 15 years. Still in question was whether the pair might be extradited to the United States or Mexico. The plane was hijacked Friday and it lasted 44 hours and took them 7,500 miles.

The State

One of five persons killed in the crash of a small plane near Philo in Champaign County has been identified as Vernor Saylor, leading jockey at River Downs race track in Cincinnati, Ohio. The plane crashed Monday and a widespread search began for the missing aircraft.

The War

Vietnam's first typhoon of the year slammed into North Vietnam at more than 100 m.p.h. after high winds and rain stopped nearly all fighting in South Vietnam's northern region. U.S. Seventh Fleet ships sought shelter, and planes were grounded as Typhoon Harriet swept up the Vietnam coast packing 138 m.p.h. winds.

Indians Can 'Stay Awhile' In Forest

An Indian group will be allowed to stay "temporarily" in a Des Plaines forest preserve while they seek adequate housing, according to Cook County officials.

The 75-member group, which began to occupy the Big Bend Lake site Friday night after a clash Thursday with Chicago Police when they were forcibly evicted from a Chicago lakefront site, will be allowed to stay temporarily because they are not interfering with others or causing a disturbance, according to officials, including George Dunne, Cook County Board president.

"We aren't going to kick them out, as long as they behave themselves," Arthur Janura, general superintendent of the Cook County Forest Preserve, told the Herald. The exact amount of time the Indians will be allowed to stay will be worked out in conferences between the Indians and the county, he said.

Although the Indians don't have a permit, they were given permission to camp at the site near Golf and River Road soon after they arrived, Janura said.

RICHARD SLOAN, head of the Cook County Forest Rangers, said he met twice Monday with Mike Chosa, 35, leader of the Indian group, the American Indian Village.

Chosa has told the Herald that the Indians want to be like other ethnic and class groups, which can live together in decent housing.

The Indian group occupied a site near Wrigley Field in Chicago last summer and occupied an apartment building this March in Chicago's Uptown community to protest living conditions of Chicago's American Indian population, they said.

In mid-June, the building burned. They then occupied a former Nike missile base at Belmont Harbor, on Chicago's north side.

Last Thursday, police and Indians clashed over removal of a fence around the former missile site. Twelve Indians were arrested and three policemen were injured in the eviction from the site, according to reports.

LATER, THE Indians were offered apartments in several housing projects in Chicago, including Cabrini Green, which they rejected as being unsafe and unfit.

They were also asked to leave the church they had gone to after the Belmont Harbor clash, they said.

They arrived at the site in Des Plaines around midnight Friday and set up a small site on the west end of Big Bend Lake.

They have received food and clothing contributions from Northwest suburban residents. They said most of their possessions were lost during the Belmont Harbor clash.

LIFE IN THE DES PLAINES Indian village seems to have settled down to a routine. The Indians are camped on the south shore of Big Bend Lake in forest preserves near Des Plaines. About 80 of the Indians came here after being displaced from Chicago. These Indian children spent their time trying to catch the meager fish of Big Bend Lake.

MSD Workers Get Course Tuition

About 155 employees of the Metropolitan Sanitary District (MSD) are expected to take part in the District's College Tuition Reimbursement Program for 1971, according to John E. Egan, MSD president.

Last year, 120 employees took advantage of the program to further their education at graduate and undergraduate levels. The program, open to all MSD employees, offers tuition reimbursement for courses at accredited colleges in the area that will apply towards the employees' bachelor's or master's degree and courses related to the job.

Undergraduates may take any course required for a bachelor's degree in a field related to their job, while graduate students can take courses related to their job, according to trustee Chester P. Majewski, chairman of the pension, personnel relations and civil service committee.

According to Majewski, most of the MSD's graduate students are majoring in sanitary engineering or business administration.

Graduate students in the MSD may receive up to $420 every six months for course tuition and undergraduates $300 every six months.

The only requirements for participating in the program are that the employee work at MSD for six months, that the classes be taken after working hours, and that the course taken is job related.

Dominic Smith, training coordinator for MSD, pointed out employees participating in the program increase their contribution to the MSD as well as their opportunity for advancement in civil service when they earn a bachelor's or master's degree.

Auditions Set For Theater's Premiere Productions

Open auditions will be held from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. July 19 and 20 in the Schaumburg Township Library for the premiere productions of the newly organized Schaumburg Festival Theater.

All persons auditioning will be asked to read from "Last Gasp," a playlet dealing with the ecological dilemma which has parts for six men and six women; "The Typists," a dramatic short play by Murray Schisgal which has parts for one man and one woman; and "Adaptation," an Elaine May comedy with roles for three men and one woman.

Two of the plays will be selected for presentation along with "The Brick and the Rose" and "Next" which will utilize the same casts as appeared in the Schaumburg Festival of Arts last month.

The four plays, to be performed in rotation on Friday and Saturday nights, Aug. 20, 21, 27 and 28, will be directed by Raoul Johnson, a Schaumburg resident and an assistant professor and technical director-designer at Loyola University.

Negotiations for a facility in which to hold the plays are still in progress with Schaumburg High School and the Schaumburg Great Hall being considered.

ON JUNE 22 at 7:30 p.m., in the Schaumburg Township Library, the Festival Theater will hold its first monthly meeting. President is Sonja Leraas of Schaumburg; vice president is Bill Mon-tello of Streamwood; secretary is Marian Waesche of Rolling Meadows; treasurer is Denis Ledgerwood of Schaumburg.

Senior board members are Rudy Waesche of Rolling Meadows and Shirley Ryan and Monti Leraas of Schaumburg. Junior board members are Chris Fikert of Hanover Park and Tom Fitzgerald of Palatine.

Membership in the Festival Theater is open to residents of all communities, teenagers as well as adults.

"What we hope will distinguish us from other theaters will be our attempt to present a broad sampling of all kinds of theater from choral plays to monologues, to one-acters, to melodramas, to full length productions. Operating on a year-round basis, we can offer our audiences dramatic production even in the summer and we plan to produce everything from Shakespeare to Schisgal and Moliere to May," said Mrs. Leraas.

Two plays already scheduled for production are "Summertime" by Ron Cowen and "The Effect of Gamma Rays on Man-In-The-Moon Marigolds" by Paul Zindel.

DIRECTORS INTERESTED in working on these plays, or in presenting other plays for consideration are invited to attend the July 22 meeting or to submit a resume and list of plays they wish to direct, to Mrs. Leraas, 308 Cloverdale Ln., Schaumburg.

An appeal is also made to anyone knowing of a place where the Festival Theater can store a large quantity of display units and sets.

"The Leraas garage just isn't big enough for everything and we would be grateful to anyone who could provide us with storage space gratis or even on a monthly rental basis," Mrs. Leraas said.

Anyone having storage space available is asked to call Mrs. Leraas at 894-2380.

Fund For Fire Victims

A fund has been set up at the Bank of Rolling Meadows to aid members of the James Wilcks family who are homeless today after fire struck their home in Rolling Meadows Monday.

Fire roared through the interior of the home at 3408 Peacock Ln. Monday evening causing an estimated $4,500 structural damage and great damage to personal belongings of seven members of the family.

Fire Chief Thomas Fogarty said firemen received the call at 7:01 p.m. and when they arrived at the scene, flames had engulfed both bedrooms. Fogarty said he believes the fire was caused by an electrical short in a bedroom.

"The Wilcks family was in the living room when they discovered the fire," Fogarty said. Although the fire was contained inside, the home was structurally damaged, Fogarty added. He said the roof dropped and floors and walls were destroyed. There also was smoke damage throughout.

NEARBY HOMES also had smoke damage and were fumigated by firemen Monday. There was no damage to nearby houses, Fogarty said.

American Red Cross officials housed the family at the Holiday Inn in Rolling Meadows Monday night and today the four children are staying at neighbors' homes.

The fund at the Bank of Rolling Meadows was established by Mrs. Kathleen Brightwell, a neighbor, and Supt. of Public Works James McFeggan. Persons interested in giving funds to the family should write the James Wilcks Family Fund at the bank, according to Mrs. Brightwell.

Others who may have articles of clothing or furniture may contact Mrs. Brightwell at 255-1833. The children are boys ages 14 and 10 and girls ages 11 and 5.

"POM-PON-PULL-AWAY" is the game that occupied this Elk Grove youngster on a recent afternoon in a playground program sponsored by the Elk Grove Park District. Children take part in the program at seven area parks.

St. Julian Parish Picnic Set Sunday

The annual parish picnic of St. Julian Eymard Catholic Church, Elk Grove Village, will be Sunday after the 11 a.m. mass in Ned Brown Forest Preserve.

The picnic, in Grove 12, is the first entrance to the forest preserve off Higgins Road west of Arlington Heights Road.

Handicapped Swim May Be Scheduled

If sufficient interest is shown, a swim class for handicapped children in Hanover Park will be scheduled this summer.

Park activities for handicapped children should be included in the district's program, Hanover Park resident Mrs. Joseph Nucci told commissioners recently.

Mrs. Nucci has three sons with physical handicaps.

Mrs. Nucci said, at her suggestion the commissioners agreed to schedule swimming lessons for handicapped children, including those that are blind, deaf, mentally or physically impaired, if sufficient interest is shown.

The instruction would be on a one instructor to one student ratio, Mrs. Nucci said.

Parents interested in enrolling handicapped children in swim classes should call the district office at 837-2468.

The district is also willing to provide other activities for handicapped youngsters if enough interest is shown.

The Hollywood Scene

by Vernon Scott

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) —Bob Hope has spent more time in cap and gown than any comedian in history and has probably logged as many hours at graduation exercises as some academicians.

The ski-nosed one holds 18 honorary degrees and will be awarded a 19th this fall.

Most of the degrees are honorary doctorates in humane letters, although there is a sprinkling of law degrees as well.

His first sheepskin was presented by Quincy College of Illinois back in 1938. His most recent was conferred earlier this month at Santa Clara University.

In this year of travail for Hope, in which he has been called a political hawk among other things, and denied Father of the Year Award by the New York City Council of Churches, the comedian didn't know what to expect from the Santa Clara students.

"COLLEGE KIDS today speak their own minds," he said.

I was wondering what kind of reception I'd get from the graduates up there. And I was pleasantly surprised.

In light of political tides and campus unrest it took courage on Hope's part to address graduation exercises at St. Bonaventure University New York and Santa Clara this spring.

In part, he told the graduates: "We need people with courage, patience, tolerance and above all a sense of humor. A person can have that no matter what his age or his hair style.

"Young people of today want change, and they certainly deserve it. Like all of us, you have to accept a 'hand-me-down' nation. A nation that the older generation worked on and tried to improve just so we could leave it to you a little better than we found it."

Addressing the graduates, Hope didn't duck the Vietnam issue which he believes is the prime reason for undergraduate discontent.

"ALL I DID was entertain in Southeast Asia, but I did witness some of the suffering and I didn't like it," Hope said at Santa Clara. "And I hope it never happens again."

"Perhaps somewhere along the line we could have withdrawn with grace and honor on our part. I don't know."

"It's your world now. Not for keeps. Just as a loan. The time will come when you have to leave it to others... please be able to say, as we are, 'We're proud of the product that we're delivering to your hands. And we're proud of the hands that we deliver it to.'"

Hope said, "The students and faculty responded. I am very proud and happy about that."

DuBrow On TV

by Rick DuBrow

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) —The producers of "Sesame Street" will introduce a companion television series in the fall to help the education of youngsters.

Title of the new program is "The Electric Company," it is aimed at improving the basic reading skills of children from seven to 10 years old, and it bows in Oct. 25, mostly on the nation's non-commercial television station. "Sesame Street," whose target audience is from 3 to 5 years old, will be returning for its third season.

"The Electric Company," a product of the Children's Television Workshop, will be seen for a half hour daily over a period of 26 weeks. This means 130 shows. More than 200 non-commercial stations will carry it, if there is no change in present plans. The Workshop also expects some commercial stations to carry it — without advertising interruptions — in various communities that don't have public television outlets.

DAILY LESSONS on "The Electric Company" will be dramatized by a repertory troupe of seven actors and actresses who will be regulars, and they will include Bill Cosby and Rita Moreno. Children in the second, third and fourth grades are the audience they want most.

If one were to focus even more, the chief target among these viewers is "the child in the lower half of the second grade in reading achievement."

Emphasis of "The Electric Company" broadcasts will be on reading for meaning. Reading, the Workshop says, "will be presented as a problem-solving endeavor in which the goal is to extract some sense from words in print." To help achieve this, each program will stick closely to a predetermined curriculum, and there will be a rapid-change magazine format using such devices as cartoons, music and electronic effects.

Says the Workshop: "Stylized, color backgrounds and sets with outsize electronic screens will flash print messages, often in the form of the type of jokes that are dear to the 7-to-10-year-old mind."

Just Politics

by Bob Láhey

It's that season when the political scene appears quiet on the surface, when all the candidates are not making any announcements "at this time" (exception, Dan Walker who made his announcement a long time ago and continues a steady stream of campaign pronouncements).

It's the time when the precinct workers take a rest and politicians generally limit their speeches to the Fourth of July (exception: Lt. Gov. Paul Simon, speaking today in Wheaton on "state indebtedness").

But generally, it's the time when political parties try to rest up and have a little fun. Area Democrats and Republicans will throw a couple of summer shindigs in coming weeks.

GENERAL VICE chairmen for the 14th annual picnic of the Wheeling Township Regular Democratic Organization were appointed at a recent meeting at the Union Hotel in Wheeling.

The picnic has been scheduled from noon to 7:30 p.m. on Saturday, Aug. 28, at a site to be announced.

Serving again as general chairman of the event is Ed Smetana, who has served in that capacity since the first picnic.

He named as vice chairmen: Kenneth Cook, Peter Wenzel, David Griffin and Frank Naujokas of Arlington Heights; Theresa Poulus, Dortha Wojek and Harvey Sturman of Wheeling; Harry Harlin of Buffalo Grove; Marilyn Meersman of Mount Prospect; and Edward Downs of Prospect Heights.

Smetana announced that all arrangements have been made for a complete "circus" program for the children, including Big Clown and his buddies.

There will be a number of games, races, mechanical rides and puzzles for the children, and free pony rides. Free ice cream and pop will be served and there will be prizes for all games and races.

For adults there will be dancing and varied refreshments, Smetana said. Colorful booths and free balloons will lend a carnival atmosphere to the occasion.

Among the featured attractions will be the Shannon Rovers Irish Bag-pipe Band under the direction of Jerry Ryan. Door prizes will include an 8-hp. snow-blower, a number of portable TV sets and Weber Grills, Smetana said.

Smetana emphasized all residents of Wheeling Township and their children are invited to the free picnic.

AREA REPUBLICANS meanwhile are winding up preparations for an "Evening of Summer Fun" in honor of Congressman Philip M. Crane, R-13th.

Sponsored by the Crane for Congress Committee, the evening will begin at 6 p.m. at the Chevy Chase Country Club in Wheeling. Activities will include singing, dancing skits and a buffet supper.

Mrs. Kathleen Sullivan of Glenview, chairman of the event, promised "no speeches and no politicking — only fun and entertainment." She said several hundred residents of Crane's district are expected, including numerous party officials and Republican officeholders.

Tickets, at $5 per person, are available by writing the committee at Post Office Box 214, Mount Prospect, 60056.

Tickets may also be obtained by phoning township ticket chairmen: Mary Gammie, Palatine, 358-4135; Eloise Canfield, Wheeling, 253-5859; Marian Miller, Elk Grove, 259-4229; Juanita Bartlett, Schaumburg, 894-9289; and Dee Hart, Schaumburg, 529-9739.

MEANWHILE, Dan Walker continues to round up a staff to conduct his drive for the Democratic nomination for governor.

He announced last week the appointment of four more aides with a variety of political experience:

— David Cleverdon, 30, of Chicago, director of organization. Cleverdon is a former executive assistant to Congressman Abner J. Mikva. He directed presidential primary canvassing for Robert F. Kennedy in Indiana and Lake County and served as an advisor in the Chicago aldermanic campaigns of William Singer and Mary Lee Leahy. In 1964 he helped found the Freedom Democratic Party in Mississippi.

— Carol Verblen of Chicago, assistant media director. A former press information staffer for Chicago radio and TV stations, Mrs. Verblen was media director for the state senatorial campaign of Bruce DuMont.

— Tony Dean, 26, of Naperville, regional coordinator, suburban Cook and DuPage counties. He was the suburban organizer for Sen. Adlai E. Stevenson III and worked in the presidential campaign of Sen. Eugene McCarthy. In 1969, he headed a campaign financing research team for Sen. George McGovern.

— David Caravella, 28, of Chicago, staff organizer. He was campaign manager for Mary Lee Leahy and served in the Stevenson campaign. He has worked in various capacities in Chicago aldermanic and congressional elections.

Education Today

by Judy Najolia

It's un-American for a school house not to have a flagpole, but if someone doesn't help the Samuel Kirk Center in Palatine, the school will open this fall without one.

Kirk Center is the school taxpayers in Palatine, Schaumburg, Elk Grove and Wheeling townships have been paying for through a 2-cent Special Education Tax. When it opens this fall, mentally handicapped children from the 10 local school districts will go to school there.

Usually, flag poles are included in construction costs of a school. When the school opens the first day, the flag pole is in and a United States flag is flying.

KIRK CENTER won't have a flag flying unless someone donates the flag pole. Numerous non-necessary items were cut from construction costs so the school could be built this year. The flag pole, a $900 item, was one which had to go.

John Wightman, director of the Northwest Suburban Special Education Organization (NSSEO), the educational cooperative building the school, has approached several flag-conscious groups to see if they want to donate money for the flag pole. The only group which expressed an interest in helping was the Arlington Heights Junior Woman's Club. The rest politely declined, giving many, many reasons why.

Every group which relies on donations for operating money is having trouble getting the public to part with its extra pennies and many groups are cutting back on their civic service projects.

KIRK CENTER will be a school for children from 3 to 18 years old who have special learning problems. Basic academic subjects will be taught, but more importantly, the students will learn how to live and contribute to family and community life. For some, the learning experience involves practicing personal and housekeeping chores. Others will learn vocational skills so they can become productive in their society.

Kirk Center has been built with tax money from every home in the Northwest suburbs. Located on Plum Grove Road in Palatine, the school will draw students from many communities.

KIRK CENTER will have elementary school students, but there will be no bicycles parked on the playground. It will have high school students, though there will be no Mid-Suburban Conference team or booster club.

PTA meetings won't be as concerned about planning fun fairs as they will be about how to help handicapped children.

Regardless of the differences between Kirk Center and other public schools, it will still be a public school where students go to prepare for an adult life.

One difference which can and should be erased is the lack of a flag pole. Kirk Center should have a flag pole from which the Stars and Stripes will be flying when the first school bus pulls up to the front door this fall.

PERHAPS A civic group will take on the Kirk Center Flag Pole Project. If no one does, the school will have the unique distinction of being the only school in the Northwest suburbs without a flag pole. And it's the only school taxpayers in all four townships are paying for.

Support For Fund Appeal Grows

$1,307 Is Contributed To 'Save The Center'

As the Herald's fund appeal for The Salvation Army Community Counseling Center ended its third week, more than 500 readers had contributed $1,307 to the campaign chest. The Center is the only full-time professional family service agency available to residents of Northwest suburbs.

Currently facing the most serious financial crisis in its six-year history, the Center soon will be forced to eliminate service to the Northwest area unless sufficient funds are raised to meet its operating deficit.

In an effort to help save the agency, the Herald has launched an appeal to its readers to donate $1 or more to a special fund. Response thus far has included many gifts in excess of $1, with a number of $5, $10 and $20 donations.

"We are encouraged by the growing number of supporters for this fund," said Charles E. Hayes, Herald editor in chief. "More donations arrive every day as more readers become aware of the critical need. We cannot let the Center curtail its service; it is all our suburbs have to offer troubled families. If more of us recognize and respond to this emergency situation, we'll be able to save the Center."

Readers may send their donations to Herald Center Fund, P. O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006.

In addition to donors published in the Herald on June 25 and 30, these residents of 11 Northwest suburbs also have contributed to the fund:

The Doctor Says

by Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb — Can you explain to me what a lipoprotein is? My husband had a special blood test and his doctor said he had increased lipoproteins. Has this anything to do with cholesterol and what should he do about it?

Dear Reader — Lip means fatlike. Fats don't exist in significant quantities in normal people in the blood except in combination with a protein. Fatty acids in the blood combine with glycerol to form a tripart particle called a triglyceride. Glycerol is actually an alcohol and chemically combines with three fatty acids. This is where the "tri" comes in. Words in chemistry, like medicine and most disciplines, are really definitions. The ending "ide" designates a salt — hence you have sodium chloride, ordinary table salt from hydrochloric acid and sodium. The triglyceride technically is a salt from organic fatty acids and glycerol. The fatty acids can be unsaturated (lacking in hydrogen atoms) or saturated (fully loaded with hydrogen) and they can have long carbon chains or short ones.

The triglyceride (tripart particle) combines with varying amounts of cholesterol and both are transported together in combination with a blood protein, combination being called a "lipoprotein."

A lipoprotein can be large or small, depending in part on the length of the carbon chain of the fatty acids. Some scientists think the large lipoproteins are more often associated with atherosclerosis or are more apt to "get stuck" in the walls of the arteries. So lipoproteins are classified in various ways related to their size. Women tend to have smaller lipoproteins than men and this is advanced as one reason why they have a lower rate of heart attacks before they have the change of life. They also have lower blood cholesterol levels.

THE CHOLESTEROL in the bloodstream is only part of the lipoprotein. Even so, chemically extracting the cholesterol from the blood and measuring its quantity has proved to be a good index of increased risk for heart attacks.

A major portion of the cholesterol is manufactured by the liver and part of it comes from cholesterol in the diet, like lots of egg yolks. A person eating two egg yolks a day will increase the cholesterol level 15 points.

What causes the body to form too much cholesterol? There is some disagreement about this, but one factor is too many calories from too much fatty food. Large scale studies of people have proved that the blood cholesterol measurements provide about as much information as you can get from the most fancy measurements of the size of lipoproteins or triglycerides or other fractions of the fat and fatlike substances in the blood. Your husband then should restrict his fat intake, eliminate any obesity he may have and stop smoking, if he smokes. If he doesn't exercise, get started on a sensible program.

The Lighter Side

by Dick West

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In discussing the battle of the sexes, my old grandmother used to say, "there ought to be a law making it harder to get married and easier to get divorced."

Whereupon my old grandfather, who couldn't abide feminine logic, would shy a bottle of Lydia Pinkham's in granny's direction, often caroming it off the top of her motorcycle helmet.

Basically, I identify with my grandfather, but the other day at a House hearing on classified documents my old grandmother's words came oozing back to me out of the swamps of time.

With an estimated 100 million pages of World War II records still bearing secret labels, give or take a couple of mesquit repair requisition forms, nearly everybody agrees there ought to be a law making it easier to declassify documents.

But that, I submit, would only solve half of the problem. For the other half (ah, there, granny), there ought to be a law making it harder to classify them in the first place.

TOWARD THAT END, here are some procedures the subcommittee may wish to consider:

License — When an Army colonel, for example, meets a document he desires to have and withhold until death do them part, his first step must be to go to the courthouse and apply for a classification license.

Waiting period — There will be a waiting period of at least six weeks between the date the license is issued and the date which document is stamped secret. This will give the colonel time to reconsider and decide whether he really wants to go through with it.

Announcement — All classification licenses will be published along with other legal notices. In addition, the colonel will be expected to give an announcement party at which he makes his intentions known.

CEREMONY — THE actual classification must be performed at a public ceremony conducted by a justice of the peace. At the appropriate time, the J. P. will say, "If there is any man present who knows of any reason why this document should not be classified secret, let him speak now or forever hold his peace."

No objections having been heard, the J. P. will place his hand on the documents and say, "I now pronounce you a state secret." Then he will turn to the colonel and say, "You may stamp the document."

As the concluding part of the ceremony, the J. P. will say, "What God and the Pentagon hath concealed from the American people, let no man leak to the New York Times."

Win At Bridge

by Oswald and James Jacoby

When today's hand was played at the Louisville Regional in April, every South player made the small slam in spades, but practically no one bid it. Dave Shebert of Little Rock and Jack Blair of Tulsa did and we feel their sequence is worth study.

Dave's spade overall was normal and Jack decided to explore with a two-diamond cue bid. He was going to wind up in spades, but wanted to explore slam possibilities. Dave's two-spade bid temperized and Jack tried three clubs. The cue bid had initiated a forcing sequence, so he wasn't worried about being dropped there.

Dave's hand had suddenly improved, so he bid three diamonds. Jack was not ready to raise spades as yet so he tried three hearts to get further information. Dave showed his club support. He didn't know if Jack really had clubs, but he didn't care because Jack would know.

This club raise was enough for Jack to take full charge. He Blackwooded and then bid six spades. The bidding is well worthy of study. It is complicated, but expert bridge is.

There are two other points of interest. If Dave had really been void of diamonds, he would have responded six dia-

Stagecoach Rides, Square Dancing Set At Randhurst

The Randhurst Shopping Center in Mount Prospect will go "western."

Frontier trimmings and square-dancing will highlight the "Randhurst Roundup," tomorrow through Saturday. Shoppers will be given the opportunity to become real-life prospectors by following a treasure map and staking their claims to a bonanza of free gifts.

The Randhurst Merchants Association will have Roundup Ranch-Hands throughout the Mall, distributing treasure maps to all shoppers 16 years old or older. Each map will have detachable coupons entitling the bearer to free gifts at 35 listed stores.

THERE WILL BE square dancing on each of the three days of the roundup.

The Arlington Squares will perform from 7 until 8:30 p.m. tomorrow with "Foggy" Thompson doing the calling. The group of 71 couples was founded 21 years ago. They meet the second and fourth Friday of each month at St. Simon Episcopal Church in Arlington Heights.

From 7 until 8:30 p.m. Friday, the "Slow Pokes" of Mount Prospect will perform, with Gene Tidwell calling. The group of 52 couples is in its ninth year. It meets the first and third Friday of each month at Euclid School, Mount Prospect.

On the third day, Saturday, the "Bucks and Does" will be featured dancers, performing from 4 until 6 p.m. Callers Thompson and Tidwell will alternate. The 16-year-old group of 75 couples meets on the second and fourth Saturdays of each month at the Dempster Junior High School in Mount Prospect.

"MANY SHOPPERS who come as spectators may find that they're interested in joining one of the groups," Gene Tidwell said. "Right now, I'm caller for 90 clubs in the Chicago area, with 21,000 members. Square dancing is a healthy hobby, and one that's growing in popularity. We hope a lot of Randhurst shoppers will get interested in it."

There will also be free stagecoach rides for visitors in the Randhurst parking lot and a trip-for-two to the musical mecca of the "western" world, Nashville, will be awarded. Each shopper will also be given a plastic shopping bag as they enter the mall during the roundup.

Mediocre Record For Legislature

The 77th Illinois General Assembly has lived up to the shoddy image established by many of its 78 predecessors.

Admittedly faced with an overwhelming workload, the legislature met the challenge by allowing most of the most pressing issues to go undecided until its final hectic days, when as usual it slipped into a morass of political invective and clown antics.

It is too soon to sort out the record on just what the Assembly accomplished and failed to accomplish on all the 4,000-plus legislative proposals submitted to it.

But on the major issues which received most public attention, the legislature compiled, at best, a mediocre record.

Among those approved were the $900 million bond issue authorization for mass transportation purposes; $30 million for aid to nonpublic schools; and a no-fault insurance plan.

All of these had behind them the political weight of strong special interests. Both Republican Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie and Democratic Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley have obvious political stakes in the transportation bill.

Bipartisan support was engendered for "parochialism," which would directly benefit parents of some 450,000 children in parochial and private schools. The no-fault plan, which critics say will injure rather than aid auto-owners, had intense backing of the big insurance companies.

Meanwhile, bills of obvious public interest — reapportionment, legislative ethics reform and a number of measures on the ecology were killed or bottled up until the Assembly reconvenes in the fall.

Reapportionment was strangled in partisanship as neither the Republicans nor the Democrats demonstrated any inclination to devise a plan which would serve the interests of the people rather than the politicians.

Both houses and both parties participated in emasculating every proposal on income disclosure by public officials, finally refusing to act on any.

An implied consent bill to require drivers to take breath tests for intoxication, though passed by the Senate, was amended beyond recognition in the House and then delayed until fall.

The House performed creditably on ecology bills, but all were blocked in the Senate. Among them were:

—The Scenic Rivers Bill, to prevent dredging and limit industrial development on the banks of nine Illinois rivers.

—A bill to ban detergents containing phosphates.

—Legislation forbidding construction of an airport in Lake Michigan.

One of the most battered of political footballs was the appropriation for increased aid to public schools. Senate Republicans and Democrats settled at the last minute on a sum of $783 million, $8 million more than the governor maintains the state can afford.

The school-aid battle centered on Democratic attempts to raise the amount to $782 million, which Republicans charged was a maneuver to embarrass Ogilvie by forcing him into large-scale vetoes.

Republican House Speaker Robert W. Blair of Park Forest matched this political shabbiness by threatening late in the session to hold captive the routine appropriation for the Supreme Court to force Democratic capitulation on reapportionment.

While many issues of public interest were ignored, the Senate treated the voters to one of its closing spectacles: An Illinois state trooper summoned to guard the Senate clock to prevent a senator from scaling the balcony to unplug it, while on the floor below, his colleagues preface each vote with a stream of political invective at their opponents and one of the elected representatives punctuates each harangue by loudly squawking a rubber duck.

The people of the State of Illinois deserve better.

Sanitary District Imagery

by TOM WELLMAN
Metropolitan Editor

What is the image that comes to your mind when the Metropolitan Sanitary District (MSD) is mentioned?

Sewage, of course, is the central image, as the MSD is responsible for sewage treatment and disposal in the Chicago metropolitan area. However, that responsibility is not one that conjures up the most favorable public image.

Another image was the furor almost two years ago when Vinton Bacon, MSD superintendent, departed from the MSD. His exit, marked by a volley of charges and countercharges about his performance, further tarred the District's image.

This reporter will admit he's covered the MSD for only five days. But, if first impressions mean anything, the MSD seems to be much more impressive close-up than from a position of ignorance.

Three random news items from the MSD in the past week or so have sparked the new impression and appreciation of the MSD. It is only an impression, and I'll save my final assessment for much later.

—MSD officials flocked to the Stickney plant, the world's largest sewage treatment plant, on Wednesday, June 16, to officially shut down the fourth and final smokestack.

President John Egan declared the action came almost three years ahead of the deadline for ending air pollution from the plant.

Officials of Campaign Against Pollution (CAP), who had been seeking MSD action, were reportedly pleased with the move. For motorists traveling on the Stevenson Expressway, the move will help clear the air — literally.

—Superintendent Ben Sosewitz and the nine MSD board members listened attentively two weeks ago to a request from Evanston officials to use MSD land for low-cost housing.

Sosewitz and others explained the land might be used for the deep tunnel project for water storage. A verdict on the use of the property should be available by Dec. 24, Sosewitz explained.

More impressively, Sosewitz explained he would be willing at any time to speak with the Evanston city council about the matter and to be "put on the grill," as he put it. The group seemed pleased with his willingness to cooperate and talk.

—Lawyers representing Montgomery Ward pleaded with the MSD to ease punitive measures taken for a mysterious oil discharge which bubbled up from the inards of the Montgomery Ward building on the north branch of the Chicago River.

A Solution: Utilize Home

In answer to Mrs. Rothbauer's letter to Dist. 59 and Supt. Erviti, I can only say Dr. Erviti certainly attempted to reach the parents and tell them what would happen by school-hour coffees, meetings of P.T.O.s' and newsletters, etc., but the parents didn't come and they didn't vote and now we have a problem.

But I am not that old that I cannot remember my Brownie and Girl Scout meetings in the home. Before all leaders turn in their resignations upon reading this, let me say I am suggesting the parents of children involved in the troop would take turns hosting the meetings at their home, I doubt if it would involve more than two possibly three meetings a year at the most.

What better way to give the two leaders a little help? For the mothers who are gasping "my house" with three women present, I'm sure the house could be protected, discipline maintained and perhaps the kids could learn a little respect for other peoples property.

Think back, parents, if you belonged to a pre-high school activity where was it held? Mine was setting on the floor of a small front room (there weren't enough chairs), having a lot of fun, games, crafts, taffy pull, cookie baking, and we behaved because we were told we wouldn't be asked back if we didn't.

Seeing that we can't use our schools for now, why not turn our show places back to a family home and take the responsibility of helping our children become "fine, upstanding, responsible adults," as Mrs. Rothbauer stated?

P.S. I'm not a Girl Scout leader!

Other Side Of Coin

I would like to address myself to the Indignant Apartment Dweller, in the hope of explaining some of the misdirected hostility sensed from the home owners. In the established suburbs, prior to the random building of apartments, homes were purchased for the expressed purpose of partaking in the life style provided by the suburb life. Life savings were invested for this privilege and not for the sake of any profit motive.

In recent years, building codes have been altered by village leaders, many times over the objections of many of the residents. One reason used was to increase the tax base. Single dwelling home owners are not convinced that apartment owners pay the same tax rate. All that is seen is an increase in population with more stress on services and utilities.

The drastic influx of apartment buildings over single home dwellings is that apartment buildings are a "Very Profitable Investment" and are perpetuated under the guise of growth and progress. The single dwelling home owner continues to carry the brunt of the increased tax burden and unless there is a change in village management thinking (doubtful), this situation will continue. Should apartment dwellers ever decide to invest in his own home, he will discover the same frustrations. He will probably look for a home some distance away from apartment buildings.

Heritage Of Freedom?

Saturday, June 26 was the 5th Annual Independence Day Parade in Arlington Heights sponsored by the Arlington Heights Jaycees.

In my opinion the theme "Freedom: Our Heritage" was an excellent one, however, as the parade progressed I soon realized the theme was just another worn out phrase.

Freedom for whom? Doesn't the American soldier in the North Vietnam prison camp deserve freedom? Why then did the Arlington Heights Jaycees see fit to remove the only float which depicted the plight of the American Prisoner of War?

Vital U.S. School Aid On The Rise

by DON GRAFF

Although few among us are any longer remembering, it was well within memory that federal aid to education was a sharply contested public issue.

The question of whether Washington should and could toss a little something into the school pot without serious damage to the American tradition of local control of education was argued, often bitterly, in Congress, editorial columns and grass roots forums.

How very much and rapidly times change.

Legislation to provide funds for the schools during the new fiscal year beginning July 1, and increasing the federal contribution by about $1 billion, has moved through Congress not only without notable argument but virtually without public notice.

In a very few years, federal aid has been transformed from an issue into an essential as the problems of the schools, which have not escaped public notice, mount.

These problems are immense because the educational system is immense. Traditional emphasis on the local schools tends to obscure the true structure of what is in important respects a gigantic public industry.

The schools directly involve almost a third of all Americans — some three million instructors and 60 million students from kindergarten through graduate school. And then there are additional millions of parents and the taxpayers who must vote the levies, and increasingly are not doing so, upon which the schools are still overwhelmingly dependent for their financing.

In our trillion-dollar economy, some eight per cent of the Gross National Product is spent annually on education, in the neighborhood of $80 billion.

Of this, the federal share, now more than $5 billion, is still distinctly minor. But one way or another — either in direct subsidies or through tax adjustment on the federal level to make local school levies less burdensome — it appears certain to increase.

In reporting out this year's aid bill, the Senate Appropriations Committee warned of the consequences of present trends:

"Colleges and universities across the country are facing bankruptcy. Tuition costs are soaring. Elementary and secondary schools are facing an unprecedented financial squeeze as revenues from the property tax are drying up and state and local governments are facing financial disaster."

Increasing federal participation may not be the most desirable solution. But if Washington must get into the business of bailing out financially swamped industries, it could scarcely find a more needy or vital candidate than education.

School Board Action Too Drastic

I'm ashamed! For the first time since I moved here I'm ashamed to be located in District No. 59.

I just returned from vacation and read about the action the Board took at its last meeting. This action, you will recall, was to close the schools to all "outside" activities.

Supt. Erviti presented two options to the Board. The first was to charge a fee for the use of the facilities which would cover the cost of their use. The second was to close down the schools to all "outside" activities.

"Outside" activities were defined as Parent-Teacher meetings, Scout troop meetings for boys and girls, and the use of the facilities on Sundays by Congregations without churches of their own. Parent-Teacher and Scouting groups are fraternal organizations which are in constant need of volunteers, encouragement, and assistance.

Dr. Erviti recommended that the Board "close" the schools to all "outside" community activities which they did by a 4 to 2 vote.

The four Board members who voted in favor of extinguishing an already flickering community spirit were: Harold Harvey, Sharrice Hildebrandt, Paul Newhauser, and Allen Scarck.

The question is: Why did the Board and the Administration take this drastic, uncalculated action? The Board was accused of not really needing the money many times at Pre-election Bond Referendum Meetings.

Indeed, it was pointed out that a prediction of less educational benefits made before the last defeated Bond Referendum did not come to pass.

The Board and the Administration seem bent on inflicting the maximum amount of pain on our community, which did not vote for this Bond Referendum.

Tom Wellman

The MSD board's decision was to send the matter back to its own staff for further discussion. After the initial discovery of the oil discharge, the MSD vigorously pursued Montgomery Ward, and the company vigorously worked to clean up the spill. The matter will probably be settled quietly "out of court."

Granted, these three incidents are three small steps for a giant public body. From my standpoint, however, it is an impressive beginning.

Senior Citizen Cause

We need low-cost housing for our many senior citizens in Arlington Heights. We need a shuttle bus service to give them an opportunity to get around independently to shop, etc. How about some headlines on the front page for their cause?

Business Today

by DEAN C. MILLER

NEW YORK (UPI) — When a company plunks down $125 a week for a secretary that's only about two-thirds of the cost story.

Because of taxes, hiring costs, government regulations and fringe benefits, that secretary costs the company $184.35. At least that's the figure determined by Dot Girls, the temporary help division of Dictaphone Corp. Dot claims business organizations lose money every year by hiring "permanents" when "temporaries" could fill the bill.

While Dot obviously is grinding an ax since it sells the services of "temporaries," its figures and reasoning are couched in logic. As Dot points out the temporary gets only an hourly rate and none of the fringe benefit goodies. There is no expense, or relatively no expense, in the hiring and separation processes.

Hiring costs, according to the company, average out to about $275 per employee. Among those costs are advertising and recruiting, testing, screening, interviewing, application forms, reference and credit checks, payroll preparations and processing.

Fringe benefits which, according to Dot, amount to about 31.7 per cent of the permanent employee's base salary, are growing yearly. They include pension, non-productive time, vacation, holidays, sick leave, profit sharing and bonuses.

Finally, there's the turnover or separation cost averaging $750 per employee. These costs include terminal interview, processing, termination pay, unemployment pay and reactivation of the entire hiring cycle.

Time spent interviewing and processing papers costs $5.29. Legal costs amount to another $6.75. Medical and pension payments run to $13.63. Non-productive time filing nails and talking on the phone to the boy friend is another $3.88. Holidays and vacations, $13.25; profit sharing and awards, $2.13. Turnover and separation, another $14.42.

"When all the real costs of permanent hiring are figured in," concludes Robert H. Cooke of Dot, "there's a lot to be said for temporary or 'flexible' staffing."

David Warren, manager of employee relations at the General Electric headquarters in New York, agrees in part. GE hires some temporaries.

"However," cautioned Warren, "the permanent employee is very desirable in any business or office which is large or complex. If it takes you half a day to explain some routine job to a girl you may never see again there's a real loss there."

Warren noted that temporary help companies often can't provide specific skills. Legal secretaries, for instance. Loyalty is another asset to the permanent employee, or most permanent employees. The temporary is here today gone tomorrow.

Reduced Rates For Picturephones

Reduced rates should add to the appeal of the "see-as-you-talk" Picturephone service in the Chicago area, according to Illinois Bell Telephone.

Seven Chicago customers of Illinois Bell Telephone have subscribed to the visual phone service. They include Hartnett-Shaw & Associates, Inc., 505 N. Lake Shore Dr., real estate investment and development firm; Mayer, Brown & Platt, 231 S. LaSalle St., law firm; N. W. Ayer & Son, Inc., 111 E. Wacker Dr., advertising agency;

Also, Hillison & Elten Co., 638 S. Federal St., commercial and financial printer; Johnson Publishing Co., Inc., 1820 S. Michigan, publisher of Ebony, Tan, Jet and Black World magazines; Central Community Hospital, 5701 S. Wood; Franklin Boulevard Community Hospital, 3240 W. Franklin Blvd.

Illinois Bell offers two forms of Picturephone service — local exchange calling and internal service.

Local exchange service allows a Picturephone customer to call another in an eight-square-mile area in and around downtown Chicago. Illinois Bell began offering it April 1.

Internal service is a network connecting up to 10 Picturephone sets in a single customer's premises. First offered last Dec. 1, it is available to all Illinois customers of Illinois Bell.

Hartnett-Shaw and N. W. Ayer have both exchange and internal Picturephone service. Mayer, Brown & Platt and Hillison & Elten have exchange service. Johnson Publishing and Central Community and Franklin Boulevard Community hospitals have internal service.

They are using their Picturephone sets in a variety of ways. But all agree that Picturephone service is helping in the daily operations of their concerns.

"Efficiency is the big thing," said William F. Hartnett Jr., Hartnett-Shaw's board chairman. "Maps, advertising layouts and plans are as common as pencil and paper in our business. Now there is no need for intra-office traffic. With Picturephone service we can have direct, complete communications and get an immediate reaction, such as approval of an ad for a new building."

Hartnett-Shaw's legal affairs are handled by Mayer, Brown & Platt. Hartnett says having a Picturephone exchange link with the law firm results in time savings.

N. W. Ayer's three-set Picturephone system helps the advertising agency fulfill its role as a service organization, said Robert P. Zabel, executive vice president. "The system provides client servicing far surpassing existing transmission systems and the opportunity for instantaneous face-to-face contact with key client people who are often unavailable on short notice. The result is a complete relaxing of formalities with all levels able to have constant working contact."

Joseph L. Strauss Jr., president of Hillison & Elten, said, "We are confident that Picturephone service will enable us to achieve faster approvals on artwork, charts, layout arrangements and other visual display elements."

Johnson Publishing has a three-set internal Picturephone system — one set in the office of John H. Johnson, president and publisher; one in his building's lobby, and one in the firm's library. The service is used in discussing magazine layouts and copy with artists and editors.

According to Patrick S. DeMoon, assistant administrator of Central Community Hospitals, Picturephone service saves employee time and is a benefit to patients who can't receive visitors. "With Picturephone service, a patient can see and talk to relatives and friends without coming in contact with them," DeMoon said.

The Picturephone system at Franklin Boulevard Community Hospital is similar to the one at Central Community, its sister hospital.

TO STIMULATE development of Picturephone service, Illinois Bell recently reduced its Picturephone rates. Several monthly charges were reduced by more than 50 per cent, and some one-time charges were eliminated.

The new monthly rate for a Picturephone set is $25, and the monthly charge for a Picturephone exchange line is $50, which includes 30 minutes of calling time. The monthly rate for an internal system is $40 plus $25 for each Picturephone set.

Illinois Bell reduced its Picturephone rates because "we feel confident that the service will rapidly expand in Chicago," says C. W. Ebersold, vice president of market planning.

In addition to a 12-button Touch-Tone telephone, the Picturephone set consists of a display unit, a control unit and a service unit. All but the service unit, which is installed out of sight, occupy desktop space.

Personal Finance

by CARLTON SMITH

Last year the Internal Revenue Service tapped nearly two million taxpayers on the shoulder and said, "We'd like to ask you a few questions about your return." That's about one taxpayer in 44 — but the odds on your being audited can be considerably higher, or lower.

Can you do anything to keep them low? In most cases, yes.

Nestled in the rolling hills of the Shenandoah Valley, at Martinsburg, W. Va., is the big computer complex of the Internal Revenue Service that stores in its memory figures from the returns of every taxpayer in the country. It's been dubbed "the Martinsburg Monster."

The Monster has been programmed to examine every return, as it's fed in, and look for indications that the taxpayer is telling the whole truth and nothing but the truth. The system is called "discriminant function," better known as DIF. The exact formulas used to detect suspicious items in a return are top secret — but we know in a general way how DIF works.

Let's say that J. Forthright, a hard-working guy who earns $15,000 a year, has itemized his deductions and listed taxes totaling $1,412. The Monster has been told that $15,000-a-year taxpayers average, on this particular item, $674. (N.B. All our figures are pure inventions — not even guesses at what might be close to the ones used by the Monster.)

So Forthright is well above average — but the Monster also knows that tax bills are higher in New Jersey than in Utah; high in Los Angeles, low in Litcher, La., etc. Taking this into account, it notes that Forthright is still 16 per cent higher than average — so it gives him a grade of 75, on a scale of 0 to 100. If this tax deduction had been 16 per cent below average, his grade would have been 25.

The Monster examines a number of items like this — up to a dozen or more, depending on the complexity of the return — and gives Forthright an over-all score. He was low on medical expenses, right in the middle on charitable contributions, etc. On balance, the Monster decides Forthright doesn't seem to be padding his deductions because of his low grade — a passing one.

But even though a tax return gets an over-all passing grade, it may be red-flagged by one particular figure. For example, suggests Ted Schneider of the IRS New York regional office, a $10,000-a-year wage earner claiming nine exemptions for dependents. The Monster just doesn't believe you can support that many people on that kind of money. You'd be filing from the poorhouse.

Returns singled out by the computers are looked at by examiners. If you've claimed some unusually high deductions, here's where it pays off to supply detailed supporting evidence and explanations. About four out of 10 returns satisfy the examiners, and get a pass. The rest become candidates for audit.

Odds on your being audited rise as your income does. At $30,000 and over, the audit rate last year was one in five. But whatever your income level, you can avoid attracting the Monster's attention by keeping a low profile.

So long as you've reported everything correctly, of course, and have the records to prove it, there's no need to worry even if the Monster does point a finger at you. So far as the IRS is concerned, honesty is a boy's best friend.

FTC Schedules Public Hearings This Month

The Federal Trade Commission (FTC) will hold public hearings in Chicago July 12-14 on the proposed trade regulation to eliminate the holder-in-the-course rule. Sessions will start at 10 a.m. in Room 204 C in the Dirksen Federal Building.

The proposed regulation would make the seller of commercial paper, as installment loans for large purchases, equally responsible with the retailer and the manufacturer for the quality of the goods sold. This is the second time in the commission's history that hearings have been held outside Washington. The agency also held Chicago hearings last October.

Today is the deadline set for those who would like to make an oral statement before the FTC. A Sept. 13 deadline has been set for written comments. Write to Assistant Director, Division of Industry Guidance, Federal Trade Commission, Washington, D.C. 20580.

An area representative to the commission is Earl Lind, president of the Better Business Bureau of Chicago, who serves as a member of its consumer advisory board.

Bids To Be Awarded

Kirk Center, Phase II Set

Construction of the second phase of the Samuel Kirk Center will begin this summer after a four month delay.

Bids for construction of Phase II, which will provide educational facilities for mentally retarded high school age students, will be awarded this month by the Northwest Educational Cooperative (NEC) board. Lowest bid is $627,286 submitted by Alan Construction Co., builders of the first phase.

CONSTRUCTION OF Phase II has been delayed because original bids opened in March were higher than expected.

Samuel Kirk Center, located on Plum

Grove Road in Palatine, is being built from a three-year special education levy approved by eight area elementary districts and two high school districts.

Phase I, which includes facilities for elementary school students, will open this fall. The second phase is expected to be completed in about a year.

Alan Construction Co. is the lowest of 13 bidders for the project. Besides the general contract, low bids make it possible to include a therapy tank, demonstration living unit and offices for the special education cooperative, the Northwest Suburban Special Education Organization (NSSEO).

"I AM EXTREMELY happy we will be able to complete all of the projects," John Wightman, NSSEO director said.

Wightman said that asking subcontractors to bid independently of the general contractor brought the March bid figures down to the amount area taxpayers have paid.

THIS IS A SWELL SHIP
FOR THE SKIPPER
BUT A HELL SHIP
FOR THE CREW

by MARY B. GOOD

Edna and Lee Hoehle of Arlington Heights are the modern day counterparts of Tom Sawyer and Becky Thatcher — with a 33-foot cabin cruiser instead of a raft.

Their days on the water are filled with challenge and adventure.

Like the time they rescued a stalled houseboat from the destructive path of a barge.

Or the time they were in a Mississippi River flood, and a submerged telephone pole surfaced in churning water to bend a prop.

Or the time they towed to safety an over-loaded boat filled with intoxicated party-goers, a violation that would have cost the foolhardy party a $500 to $1000 fine if the Coast Guard had ticketed them.

THE HOEHLES ARE members of the Coast Guard Auxiliary. Joining two years ago, they lost no time in volunteering for "sea duty." Lee is public education officer for their flotilla (area group), and Edna is division secretary (regional group). The Auxiliary is not to be confused with the U. S. Coast Guard. The Auxiliary is the civilian arm of the military unit. Auxiliaries give assistance to boaters; they are not law enforcement officers.

The group has its social functions — regattas, the Commodore's Ball, etc., but the emphasis is on education and promoting safety. Courtesy boat inspections by the Auxiliary, for example, prevent a multitude of boating mishaps.

This year the Hoehles are going operational. This means that their boat will be used for patrol on the Illinois River, assisting in search rescue and flood missions. Their official job will be to assist people imperiled on the water.

"THE DIFFERENCE between anxiety and full enjoyment of boating is education," Edna said. "Security means knowing how to pilot in a storm, what to do if you run out of gas, if a prop breaks, how to fix a motor, what to do if someone aboard gets 'seasick'."

Edna is in the process of getting her instructor's badge so she and her husband can teach seamanship as a team. This is only one of the many free courses offered by the Coast Guard in night school programs.

Others are rules of the road, legal responsibilities, marlin spike seamanship (knot tying), care of the lines, etc.

The Hoehles' lapstrake hull cruiser is powered by twin inboard engines with a total of 460 horsepower. Their home on the water includes a foreward stateroom, dinette, a "head" (bathroom), a galley (kitchen), a lounge and a large aft deck (back porch).

GUESTS FIND the Hoehles' hospitality runs to Burgundy stew, spaghetti sauce with wine, hamburger cookouts, homemade muffins, rolls and cakes. An invitation to board always includes a quickie course in boatmanship — how to Flemish a line, where to find a working station.

Their boat, "The Pamaces," is docked at Seneca, Ill., a beautiful part of Illinois rich in Indian lore. "Where life rolls on," Edna said, "no pushing, and we get away from the rat race."

Today's Best Cellars

by KAY MARSH

Can you guess the highest price ever paid for a bottle of wine? Would you say $100? $1,000? Guess again! At a wine auction held in San Francisco in May, Laurence Bender, a Boston wine merchant, paid $5,000 for a bottle of rare, old French wine. Mr. Bender's $5,000 bought him 24 ounces of 1846 vintage Chateau Lafite, a red Bordeaux, from the personal cellars of the Rothschild family of France.

This reportedly is the highest price ever paid for a bottle of wine anywhere in the world. Since only three bottles of the 1846 Lafite are known to still exist in the world, it's highly unlikely that you or I will ever sample it, even if we could afford more than $100 for a half-ounce taste.

Nor would we be apt to appreciate it. True connoisseurship requires time, talent and money. It takes a dedicated apprenticeship to master the rituals of choosing the right wines from the right vines, not to mention what goes with what and at what temperature and in what glasses it should be served. The whole thing gets so complicated that most of us just give up, or else serve a safe sherry or champagne.

NEVERTHELESS, more and more Americans are becoming more and more interested in wines. Investing in wines is a popular business activity, and often a highly rewarding one if you don't drink up the profits. Wine-tasting parties are more common than Tupperware affairs in many areas. Some authorities even say that wine has become a major status symbol for the seventies.

That little old wine maker may also be you or your neighbor, as more and more take up the hobby. While most amateurs concentrate on conventional types, others experiment with such conversation pieces as chocolate-flavored wine or old-fashioned dandelion wine. (There is, by the way, a recipe for the latter in Joan Ranson Shortney's book, "How to Live on Nothing.")

But liberation has come to the vineyards, too. Among the fastest selling wines today are the fruit-flavored "pop" wines — served in paper cups if you like, and even "on the rocks." To true wine-lovers, they're just "soda pop with alcohol" and no connoisseur would try or buy one. But they're popular with the young, and some not-so-young. Both groups together are pushing sales to an estimated $75 million a year. Pop wines offer a sweet fruit flavor that appeals to unsophisticated palates, plus a relatively low alcoholic content (usually around 11 per cent).

PERHAPS THEIR GREATEST attraction is the minimal price. An ad in our local college paper lists four wine specials for this week: Bali Hai at 89 cents; Boone's Farm Apple Wine at 95 cents; Red, White and Pagan Pink Ripple Wine at 89 cents; and Cold Bear Wine ("Incredibly Good - Serve Incredibly Cold") at 98 cents. Among several other popular flavors are Zapple (apple), Spanada (grape) and Ripple (grape wine and tropical fruits).

If pop wines are too unsophisticated for you but you still like the idea of a sweet cooler, try Sangria, which they serve in Spain much like our iced tea. Here's one easy recipe: Combine a fifth of dry red wine with juice of one orange, juice of half a lemon and one package of frozen peaches (with syrup). Let stand until peaches defrost. Pour into a tall pitcher. Add ice cubes, fill pitcher with soda and stir. Garnish with a spiral of orange peel.

THE QUOTE BOARD. Someone has defined the true wine lover as a man who, when invited out for an evening of wine, women and song, asks what kind of wine. And probably what vintage year.

HUSBAND AND WIFE discuss strategic points of boat safety inspection, one of the vital functions of the Coast Guard Auxiliary. Lights, fire extinguishers and life preservers are three "musts" for every motor boat on the water, large or small. Courtesy inspections are part of the Hoehles' activities. They make safety an integral part of boating fun.

AHOY MATEY! Edna Hoehle (hail ee) prepares to tie up in the boat's slip. Mrs. Hoehle is division secretary with the Coast Guard Auxiliary, the second highest position to which a woman can aspire in the group.

Mimi Nelson Marries Stritch Medical Student

There'll soon be a doctor in the family of the Robert Nelsons, 204 S. Maple Lane, Prospect Heights. Their daughter, Mimi, a graduate nurse from Columbus School of Nursing in Chicago, became the bride June 5 of Terence G. Banich, a senior at Loyola Stritch School of Medicine.

Mimi is now employed at Hines V. A. Hospital in Maywood, but she met her bridegroom when she was employed at St. Joseph Hospital in Chicago where Terence did his clerkship in medical-surgical studies.

Mimi is also a graduate of Sacred Heart of Mary High School in Rolling Meadows, and her husband, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Banich of Chicago, is a graduate of Loyola University.

St. Alphonsus Church in Prospect Heights was the scene of the 11 a.m. nuptial mass at which Rev. Richard Feller officiated. Church decorations for the double ring service were white daisy mums and yellow gladioli. The yellow and white theme was also carried out in the bridesmaids' shirtwaist gowns.

Janice Nelson of Rolling Meadows, a sister-in-law, was matron of honor, and bridesmaids were Melanie Van Heirseele, a cousin from Libertyville, and Marianne Ovnik of La Grange Park, sister of the bridegroom.

The maids carried baskets of white and yellow daisies.

Mimi's gown was of English net with a ruffled Alencon lace over length veil was of English net and re-embroidered Alencon, and she carried a cascade of white roses, stephanotis, baby's breath, carnations and spider mums. Mr. Nelson gave his daughter in marriage during the double ring service.

Thomas Mielke of Chicago was the groom's best man, and ushers were his brother, Dr. Francis Banich of Elmwood Park, and Michael Garcia of Broadview, a classmate.

Following the service a reception for 125 guests was held in Old Orchard Country Club. Mrs. Nelson chose a bluish apricot sheath in crepe while the bridegroom's mother chose an apricot voile sheath with sleeveless matching coat for the wedding and reception. Both mothers wore corsages of green cymbidium corsages.

The newlyweds are now residing in Broadview after a two-week honeymoon in Jamaica and St. Thomas Island.

Japanese Bath Customs Unchanged

by ROBERT CRABBE

TOKYO (UPI) — In the last red glow of Tokyo's smog-smeared sunset, people start appearing in the narrow streets carrying little wash basins and towels.

It's bath time in Tokyo and, for more than half the 11.5 million persons in the world's largest city, this means a journey to a public bath house.

There is nothing like Japanese bathing in America or Europe. Modernization has given the Japanese cars, television and washing machines but has left the Japanese people's way of bathing almost untouched.

As they did centuries ago, Japanese still scrub themselves outside the bathtub and then step into tanks of water as hot as a human being can stand for a long aftersoak.

The only concession to modern times is that the sexes have stopped bathing together in most parts of the country. Tokyo bath houses have been chasely segregated through most of the 20th century.

HOWEVER, the janitors and cashiers who work in these places almost invariably are women. They go about their duties — fully dressed of course — and seemingly oblivious to the droves of naked males who surround them.

There were 2,650 bath houses in Tokyo at the start of this year, according to the city government. Hardly anybody in Tokyo has to walk more than about half a mile to get to one. In any neighborhood, the bath house can be identified by its tall smokestack, which starts belching smoke about three o'clock in the afternoon.

Arriving at the bath, Japanese men and women remove their shoes and deposit them in lockers, pocketing the keys.

Entering through separate doors they find themselves divided by a barrier about eight feet high that separates the men's facility from the women's.

A GIRL CASHIER at a raised desk commanding a view of both sides of the barrier collects the fees — 38 yen (10.5 cents) from adults and 20 yen (5.5 cents) from children.

In the dressing room, the male bather sheds his clothes in full view of the cashier, and quite likely a woman janitor who is sweeping the floor.

Clothes are deposited in free lockers. The bather retains the key by a string around his wrist during the bath. But most people seem to have little fear of theft. They leave their baskets of clothing in a corner of the room, and proceed to the white tile floor of the scrubbing area.

Here little twin taps of hot and cold water have been mounted in long rows about six inches above the floor. The bather sits on a low stool in front of these taps, scrubbing, rinsing and scrubbing again until the last trace of dirt is gone from his body. Many disregard the stools and kneel on the floor, Japanese style.

THEN COMES THE visit to the hot tank. Most bath houses have two, one heated to about 100 degrees (Fahrenheit), and the other to about 110 degrees.

Most bathers are satisfied with about five or ten minutes in the tanks, though some stay up to half an hour.

When emerging, the bather is warm,

Newlyweds Share A Cousin

Newlyweds Mary Ann Nawoj of Mount Prospect and Raymond W. Gondek of Chicago aren't exactly shirttail cousins, but they do have a common relative. Her father's cousin, Don Kaczor of Arlington Heights, is also the groom's mother's cousin, and the pair met through the family not quite two years ago.

The couple's May wedding took place in St. Raymond Catholic Church in Mount Prospect, and of course Cousin Don was one of the attendants. The bride's sisters, Joan and Alice, were also among the attendants, as were her brother, Jim, and the groom's brother Gary.

Parents of Mary Ann are Mr. and Mrs. Edward John Nawoj, 506 S. Na-Wa-Ta, Mount Prospect; the groom is the son of the Walter Gondeks of Chicago.

Relatives and guests numbered 300 when they greeted the newlyweds during the reception held at Allgauer's at the O'Hare Concord, after which Mary Ann and Raymond left on a 10-day honeymoon in Hawaii and San Francisco.

The newlyweds are now at home in Rolling Meadows where they live at Three Fountains on-the-lake. Both are teachers, Mary Ann at St. Zachary School in Des Plaines and Raymond at the Audy Home in Chicago. The bride is a graduate of Brescia College in Owensboro, Ky., and the groom of St. Ambrose College in Davenport, Iowa.

Bridegroom Will Coach In Manito

This fall will find Michael MacKenzie Mueller and his bride residing in Manito, Ill., where Michael will be teaching and coaching at Foreman High School. With a major in history and social studies education and physical education, Michael is a graduate of Eastern Illinois University in Charleston, Ill.

His bride, the former Patsy Lee Dickens, is also a graduate of Eastern Illinois and has a degree in home economics education. She is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Dale R. Dickens of Columbus, Ohio, and Michael is the son of the Edward J. Muellers, 216 N. Dale Ave., Mount Prospect.

The wedding took place June 19 in Trinity United Methodist Church in Columbus with Dr. Lloyd C. Zoller officiating. It was a 2 o'clock, double ring service followed by a reception for 100 at the home of the bride's parents.

Michael and Patsy, who met in college, honeymooned for three days at the Marriott Inn in Cincinnati. Michael is also a graduate of Prospect High School, and in college he became affiliated with Sigma Pi Fraternity.

For the wedding ceremony, during which both Dr. and Mrs. Dickens gave their daughter in marriage, the church was decorated with tall vases of white Fuji mums and tangerine carnations at the altar. Pews were marked with Fujis, greenery and white satin bows.

Mrs. John Snively of Hoopston, Ill., sister of the bride, was matron of honor, and Mrs. Judy Phipps of Seymour, Ill.; Miss Donna Winslow of Springfield, Ill.; and Miss Cheryl Johnson of Bradon, Ill., were bridesmaids. Junior bridesmaid was the groom's sister, Miss Connie Mueller of Mount Prospect.

The matron of honor was in a floor-length silk chiffon gown of apricot with Venice lace trim, a portrait neckline with taiting trim and short puffed sleeves. The bridesmaids wore in maize silk chiffon gowns fashioned like the matron of honor's, and all wore white lace chokers. Mrs. Snively carried a French bouquet of white daisies with tangerine carnations. The maids' bouquets were the same except with yellow daisies.

The bride chose a floor-length gown of chiffon and Venice lace fashioned with Empire bodice with square neckline and short puffed sleeves. The A-line skirt was encircled with a wide lace band at the hemline. Her train was chapel length and her silk illusion veil was held in place with a bishop Venice lace headpiece.

Patsy's flowers were a cascade of stephanotis and ivy foliage centered with white French carnations and yellow Sweetheart roses.

The groom's brother, Stephen P. Mueller of Trumbull, Conn., was best man, and ushers were Paul Ward of Deerfield; Don Whitlock of Macomb, Ill.; and Dave Beckstrom of Minneapolis, Minn.; and the groom's brother, Patrick Mueller of Mount Prospect.

For the wedding and reception the bride's mother chose a street-length dress in brown and white chiffon while Mrs. Mueller chose a sleeveless dress of mint green knit. Both had corsages of off-white cymbidiums.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Firnbach

Firnbachs Mark 50th

When the Henry Firnbachs celebrated their wedding anniversary last week, they had 50 years' memories of Buffalo Grove living.

Henry was just a little shaver when his parents, Michael and Minnie Firnbach, moved to Buffalo Grove and opened Buffalo Bill's Tavern.

In childhood Henry met Della Weidner, whose parents farmed on Dundee Road. The couple married on June 28, 1921, in St. Mary's Church. On June 27, they celebrated their golden anniversary Mass in the same church. A dinner and reception for 300 followed in the school hall.

Marital longevity runs in the Firnbach family. Henry is the fourth offspring of Minnie and Michael to celebrate his 50th wedding anniversary.

Henry and Della managed Buffalo Bill's, the first and only tavern in Buffalo Grove, for 20 years after Henry's father died. While the tavern has changed hands several times since the Firnbachs had it, it is still a village "landmark" (now called Bill's Buffalo Inn).

Mr. Firnbach also owned a carpentry-contracting business, from which he retired three years ago.

Della Firnbach was born in Buffalo Grove; Henry came to the village by way of Arlington Heights. Though they have no children, the couple have many nieces and nephews, all very close to them, say the Firnbachs.

The Home Line by Dorothy Ritz

We've been bombarded by letters criticizing the advice given a reader who wanted to know how to get stains out of baby garments. Yes, we said soaking in an enzyme-active laundry product would do the trick. Recommending anything with a high phosphate content is something less than popular in this era of ecology-minded citizens. That's fine and understandable. The amazing thing, however, is the insistence that if biodegradables are used, the problems would be solved. But all detergents and enzyme-active products are now biodegradable — and have been for at least five years. The phosphate content is still there.

Until the manufacturers come up with some provable, workable substitute, we're all stymied. For the time being, soaking in a soap flakes solution (providing you can find it in the stores) will do much to get rid of stains. However, it still won't do the job as well as the more powerful detergents.

Dear Dorothy: It must be the kind of water M.D.F. uses that produces clear ice cubes. I tried hot water out of the tap, I tried boiling water — and let the trays sit for eight minutes before putting in the refrigerator. Just as cloudy as ever. — Grace A.

Dear Dorothy: Is there any rule about how much salt one should add to one pound of ground meat? — Isobel Honet.

Don't know whether this amount is absolute or not, but most recipes recommend one teaspoon salt to one pound of ground meat.

Dear Dorothy: Old sponges never die! They become stuffing for tots' tubable, terrycloth toys — Maggie.

Dear Dorothy: I've always thought it necessary to wax vinyl floors if not for other reason than to keep them from getting scratched and the surface from showing wear. However, I keep hearing that waxing is old-fashioned and is not as necessary with the new vinyl coverings being pushed now. Who is right? — Virginia T.

The great majority of vinyl floor coverings do, indeed, need some kind of wax or vinyl dressing. There are some new types of vinyl to which wax won't even stick. If you are interested in this new type, make it a point to buy from a reputable firm and follow the company's advice on whatever treatment the floor covering needs. Some people have reported being suckered by high pressure sales people in less than quality stores.

Newcomers' Picnic

The annual picnic of the Wheeling-Buffalo Grove Newcomers Club will be held on Sunday, July 18, at 11 a.m. at Cook's Picnic Grove in Wauconda.

Dear Dorothy: When a recipe calls for raisins, how do you keep them from falling to the bottom? Also, how do you spread the raisins evenly in the batter? Mrs. William C.

When a batter is thin, raisins invariably will sink to the bottom. Ordinarily with regular batter, just reserving a little of the flour called for in the recipe and mixing this with the raisins, then gently spreading them in place will keep them there. Another method is to spoon in some batter, then a layer of raisins, continuing this way until everything is in.

Dear Dorothy: My husband works at night so must sleep in the daytime. But the bedroom is right above the kitchen and he is often disturbed by the appliances being used. How can we eliminate some of the noise? — Mrs. W. T.

Ceiling tiles in the kitchen can absorb much of the noise. And if the bedroom isn't already carpeted, that would screen out still more.

Dull Play Hampers Debut

Arlington Park Theatre An Asset

by GENIE CAMPBELL

There is nothing small time about the new Arlington Park Theatre except the current play itself.

Many Chicago theatergoers weren't even quite sure where they were going when they headed out to Arlington Heights for the opening of "Relatively Speaking." They quickly learned, however, that it really is possible to grow chandeliers in the suburbs.

Perhaps the most memorable part of last week's premiere was watching the various members of the audience walk through the gigantic arches into the lobby of the very plush theater. Expressions mirrored surprise.

All this right in the middle of suburbia? But what an advantage. Elegance and a great deal of sophistication combined with more than enough parking space... that's free.

Where else can you find legitimate theater complete with fountains, terrace and lots of red carpeting right next to a race track?

With the theater operational and esthetically very pleasing, it was an extreme disappointment when the performance did not live up to its surroundings. While not a disaster, the comedy "Relatively Speaking," is tedious enough to put some to sleep and force others to sneak out during intermission. Much of the laughter is simply an outcome of boredom.

Most important, it is not the kind of performance necessary to spontaneously ignite enthusiasm for a new theater.

Neither did inner turmoil have anything but a detrimental effect. We were assured Ray Milland became ill... possibly so.

But there is no way to cover up the fact that Douglas Seale, the director, refused to accept any responsibility for the production, saying he found it impossible to work with Joan Fontaine.

The one deserving a red feather in his cap is Ian Martin, the only funny bone of the performance. I can't imagine Ray Milland playing the role any better.

When Martin is on stage, the audience pays attention. Needless to say, he is the only one to draw applause. Even more amusing than his lines are Martin's animated expressions and unforgettable "Mr. Magoo" type laugh.

Joan Fontaine, the original star of the show, is memorable only in scenes opposite Ian Martin, who acts as a crutch for whoever is on stage.

"Relatively Speaking," by Alan Ayckbourn is simply a comedy of errors. A young man believes he is meeting his fiancée's father who is in reality, her ex-lover. Meanwhile the father thinks the young man is having an affair with his wife and so on.

The Arlington Park Theatre is a definite asset to the area, and as far as theater-in-the-round goes, the construction is perfect. Perhaps in August, a different play will do the new theater justice.

ELEGANCE AND SOPHISTICATION. The plush decor of the lobby is particularly highlighted with Italian-glass chandeliers. Off to one side of Arlington Park Theatre is a small terrace. The arena-type theater seats 724.

THE PADDOCK BILLBOARD

Commercials Main Target Of Children's TV Reform

by PATRICIA McCORMACK

NEW YORK (UPI) — Mother and child are in a toy or food store this day. Charming child pulls or pushes mom to a display of a product advertised on a children's television program. Child repeats many of the points about product made in the entertaining commercial. What's mom to do? Or dad — if he's the parent in a tight spot.

"Just say 'no' and don't feel guilty about it," Mrs. Evelyn Sarson said in an interview.

Mrs. Sarson is one of three Newton, Mass., mothers who started a crusade to improve children's television programming nearly four years ago.

The three founded Action for Children's Television (ACT) and recruited parents and professionals nationwide to work on upgrading commercial television programming for children.

ORGANIZATION MEMBERS today include the National Education Association and the National Congress of Parents and Teachers. Affiliated groups operate in San Francisco; Pittsburgh, Pa.; Chicago; New York; Dallas; Providence, R.I.; Washington, D.C.; and Tucson, Ariz. In addition, 3,500 members living in 40 other states work as individuals to improve programming for children.

One of the major irritations cited by Mrs. Sarson is the 16 minutes of commercials per hour of children's programming on network television. This compares to eight to 10 minutes of commercials on prime-time programs aimed at adults or a mixed audience.

Other sources of discontent: Not enough daytime network programming for children.

On Saturday mornings network programming is offered one network against the other. She thinks it should be spaced out.

MRS. SARSON and the other founders of ACT, Mrs. Peggy Charen, and Mrs. Judith Chalfen, think they rocked some boats while in New York recently to participate in a workshop on children's television programming.

The workshop, organized by the American Management Association and sponsored by the ABC television network, resulted in no direct action. "But I think we left some impressions," Mrs. Sarson said.

Mrs. Sarson, once with the Manchester Guardian, a British newspaper, believes children's programming will change for the better when enough parents nudge the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) with letters demanding reform.

An FCC inquiry into children's programming ended July 2, but it's still not too late to get off a letter, says Mrs. Sarson.

"Mark it Children's TV, FCC, 1919 M. St., N.W., Washington, D.C.," she said. "Tell what you think of children's programming."

THROUGH THE ARCH. Guests arrive for the opening of the new Arlington Park Theatre immediately adjacent to Arlington Park Towers.

Streak Ends; Logan Square Splits

BASEBALLLOGY: 2 by OLDERMAN

PULLING THE STRING is the pitcher's favorite play for catching a batter off balance. It is also known in baseball parlance as a change of pace.

The idea is to set the batter up for a fastball or quick slider and then, using the same full motion, take something off the pitch (or pull the string) so that he's already into his swinging motion before the ball reaches the plate.

It's particularly effective against a man who swings from the heels.

At the same time, the change of pace takes considerable guts and good acting by the pitcher because if the batter is tipped off in advance the pitch becomes a nice, fat sitting duck.

Some hurlers have come up to the majors with a natural affinity for throwing this pitch. Johnny Podres was one, and he wouldn't hesitate in some circumstances to use it on the first pitch to a batter. Rip Sewall offered another version of letting up on a pitch when he came up with his notorious blooper, which followed the arc of a rainbow before it descended on the over-anxious batter.

by JIM COOK

St. Victor was the scene of perhaps the most explosive Fourth of July fireworks display in the area as Logan Square rocketed 25 hits for 31 runs en route to a doubleheader triumph over Pekin.

Monday's continued celebration turned into a soggy disappointment, however, as visiting Lane Tech put an end to an 11-game Lion winning streak when they pinned a 4-2 setback on Logan Square in the first game of a twinbill.

The Lions avenged their third defeat of the season against 29 wins when they bounced Lane in the nightcap, 5-4.

The Pekin opener was an instant rout as Logan Square came up with its two most productive innings of the campaign — a nine-run second and an eight-run third — to win going away, 19-3.

Three-run homers by Mike Pettenuzzo and Dick Drolet highlighted the second-inning fireworks. Joe Bombicino tripled and singled in the frame while Drolet also added a run-scoring double.

In the third, it was no-hit Ken Martin's turn to register a pair of safeties — a pair of doubles — and southpaw Pete Cavallero's chance to pad his batting average with a double and triple.

Terry Smith breezed through the first five innings of the slaughter for the victory while Craig Zander yielded a single run over the final two frames. The combo failed to walk a batter and struck out a total of seven.

FIRST GAME

SCORE BY INNINGS

Pekin	000	200	1-3	9-6
Logan Square	000	002	x-19-14-1

The bombs were still bursting when Logan Square nailed down its 11th straight and 28th triumph of the season, 12-7. After a scoreless first, the Lions combed Pekin pitchers for a four-run second and five-run third.

Cavallero's bat blistered for five RBI's over the two innings which included a two run single in the second and a three-run triple in the third. Bombicino joined the vast group of Lion contributors with a three-run triple of his own in the fifth.

Jim Miller was raked for seven runs on seven hits in going five and two-thirds innings. Terry Smith came on again with another stout relief performance.

SECOND GAME

SCORE BY INNINGS

Pekin	000	004	0-7	8-1
Logan Square	005	030	x-12-11-1

A rugged Lane Tech outfit briefly cooled off the Lions with strong pitching and a tight defensive assault. Logan Square managed just six hits, one a towering home run by Pettenuzzo in the first inning.

Lane, meanwhile took advantage of a wild spell by Bombicino for the winning margin. Bombicino walked two runs home in the third frame while firing a robust total of 141 pitches.

Joe walked eight overall while fanning 10 and the Lions rallied for a run in the sixth when Cavallero was hit by a pitch and Pettenuzzo singled, they just couldn't slice deeper into the two-run deficit.

FIRST GAME

SCORE BY INNINGS

Lane Tech	000	000	0-4-8-1
Logan Square	100	001	0-2-6-2

Craig Zander made sure Logan Square's longest losing streak of the season remained one game when he hurled six and two-thirds innings of strong ball. The hard-throwing lefty yielded only one run through the first six frames before running out of gas in Lane's three-run seventh. Craig walked nobody and whiffed 10.

The Lions tallied singletons in each of the first three innings with a Pettenuzzo double and a Stan Bobowski single being the key blows.

Logan Square's winning rally came in the fifth when Steve Smith, Mike Garbus, Jim Quade and Zander all singled. Terry Smith extinguished Lane's final rally with a harmless groundout to preserve the Lions' 29th victory.

WITH WAVING flags and the crash of cymbals, a drum and bugle corps takes the field in Saturday's competition at Wheeling High School.

Champions Are On Parade ...

Stirring music, shiny instruments, and snappy uniforms delighted the crowd which viewed the "Midwest Parade of Champions" Saturday at Wheeling High School.

The occasion was a national drum and bugle corps contest which attracted six corps from across the country. The competition was sponsored by the First Illinois Drum and Bugle Corps of Wheeling, who plan to make the contest an annual event.

An estimated 700 young people participated in the program, demonstrating the talent they have developed after months and months of hard work.

A sell-out crowd, including Henry Hyde, majority leader of the state House of Representatives, viewed the proceedings.

Youths Indicate Kennedy Will Be Next President

by STEVE NOVICK

A dozen youths from scattered areas in Schaumburg Township, yesterday indicated Edward Kennedy would be the next president of the United States if they are able to choose our nation's next leader.

President Richard Nixon signed into law Monday a constitutional amendment giving 18-year-olds the right to vote in all elections. It's estimated 11 million young people will now be eligible to vote in local, state as well as national elections.

Only two youths made President Nixon their choice. Six voted for Kennedy, one for Edmund Muskie, one for George Wallace, and two did not express an opinion.

They chose from a field that also included Hubert Humphrey, John Lindsay, John Kerry, Lester Maddox, George McGovern, Paul McCloskey, John O'Neill, Ronald Reagan, Nelson Rockefeller, and John Tunney.

HALF THE group said they'd be most likely to affiliate with the Democratic Party. Only two said they'd be Republicans and four would be independents.

All but two said they'd register to vote and half those who will register knew where to go for voter registration.

"I don't know if I'll register or not. I don't know if I know enough yet to register," said Terry White, 19, of 131 Durham Ln., Hoffman Estates.

She said her boy friend is 21 and hasn't registered. She did, however, have opinions on local and national problems, citing the water problem in Hoffman Estates as the most pressing local issue and population control as her top priority domestic concern in the United States.

All but one of the youths said they'd vote "yes" on a referendum to have all U.S. troops pulled out of Vietnam by Dec. 31, 1971.

RECREATIONAL facilities and jobs for teenagers was the most pressing concern of seven from the group, asked about community problems. Other responses were a reflection on Hoffman Estates water problem or feeling there are no local problems.

Dan Lunbeck, 19, grew up in Hoffman Estates, was married two weeks ago and now lives in a Schaumburg apartment.

Asked what the U.S.'s most important domestic need is, he said, "a new president."

"Segregation and prejudice against people of other colors who can't get jobs," is the number one national concern of Sue Hanson, 17, of 108 Briar Cliff Ct., Hoffman Estates.

Sue was the only youth interviewed who could identify a township committee member, naming Republican Donald Totten.

HALF THE GROUP knew the name of the mayor in the town where they live, but none knew the name of their U.S. Congressman, or any of their representatives in Springfield.

Unemployment, poverty, pollution, and inflation were also named by the sample group as their top domestic concerns nationwide.

"We haven't decided whether we'll have a drive aimed just at 18 year old voters yet," said Donald Totten, Schaumburg Township Republican Committee member.

"We're having a drive to register voters in every precinct, and just completed one in Hanover Park," he said, adding, "We'll resume this September and continue through the March primary."

"We haven't done any survey of the 18 and 19 year olds in the township, but judging from the kids active in TARS (Teen Aged Republicans), it shows most are Republican," Totten added. TARS is for 13 to 19 year olds; most members are 14, 15 and 16 years old.

"I THINK THAT since the township is largely Republican, most 18 year olds would also vote Republican," he added.

Democratic Committee member John Morrissey said, "We'll be concentrating on getting 18 and 19 year olds to register, though we have no specific program in mind."

"I think they will be registering in significant numbers because of the upcoming presidential election," Morrissey said adding, "I hope they become a significant vote block in state and local elections because I think they'll lean toward the Democratic Party."

Morrissey said his evaluation is "just a feeling and comes from what I read."

SCHAUMBURG JAYCEE Barry Goldberg, left, gave credit where credit was due when he allowed Bob Bogart of Buffalo Grove to fill in a raffle ticket from the Schaumburg Jaycee Carnival and mail his dollar in later. Bogart and his daughter Mary Francis will enjoy the prize, a $1,800 camper trailer, on a family vacation this week.

Man Of Honor Wins Camper At Carnival

A man of honor has won the $1,800 camper trailer raffled at the Schaumburg Jaycee carnival recently, said Barry Goldberg, vice president.

Goldberg was at the Illinois Jaycees state convention several weeks ago when he stopped Bob Bogart, a Buffalo Grove Jaycee, and attempted to sell him a raffle ticket for the camper.

"I'd buy a ticket, but I don't have a collar," said Bogart.

Goldberg, recognizing a Jaycee as a man of integrity, said "Fill in the ticket and send me a buck when you think of it."

The ticket was taken, and about three weeks later Goldberg received $1 in the mail from Bogart, whom Goldberg had never met before the convention.

Bogart's veracity paid off when his ticket was drawn June 27.

"I THINK it's great," Bogart said after receiving his camper last week.

"We're taking a trip to New England this week," he added. The trip was planned before Bogart won the camper and said he didn't plan on using a trailer until winning the raffle.

"It sleeps eight," he added. The camper will be pretty filled too. On the trip, Bogart is taking his wife, two daughters, his son and a daughter's friend.

Bogart said he didn't know anything about campers until now, but he's looking forward to using his prize.

Believe 7-Month-Old Girl Electrocuted

The 7-month-old baby daughter of a Hoffman Estates couple died of apparent electrocution Monday afternoon in Evanston.

Allisa Moore was found by her father, Jerry Moore, of 231 Lexington Dr., Hoffman Estates, on the floor of an apartment room where she had been left sleeping. She was in contact with a floor lamp which had been plugged in, said Evanston police, and apparently had provided a ground for the lamp. Her parents were helping C. Thomas Johnson and his family move into the apartment at 2818 Reese, Evanston.

The Cook County Coroner's office said yesterday an inquest will be scheduled. No funeral arrangements had been made yet.

Bike Hike Slated

A "Bike Hike" will begin at 10:30 a.m. Friday at Jennings House Youth Center for all interested children living within Schaumburg Park District.

The event will start with judging and presentation of awards for decorated bicycles and then participants will go on a circular bike tour of the village.

On their return to Jennings House Youth Center, games and other activities by special event in the park district summer Park in Chicago will comprise the week-long round out the special event.

Patrolman Granted Week's Continuance

William F. Heidt, 31, of 962 Valewood Dr., Bartlett, was granted a week's continuance, until Tuesday, when he appeared yesterday in Cook County Circuit Court in Niles.

Heidt, a patrolman with the Schaumburg Police Department, was charged by that department with grand theft a week ago yesterday. He allegedly stole $1,000 to $1,100 worth of merchandise from the Sears Roebuck and Co. store being prepared for opening at Woodfield Mall. The thefts allegedly occurred over a week and a half just prior to Heidt's arrest.

The patrolman had submitted his resignation from the Schaumburg force three weeks prior to his arrest, and it was to have become effective last Wednesday. Police Chief Martin Conroy rejected the resignation when Heidt was arrested, and placed the patrolman on suspension. Heidt is to request a hearing before the village fire and police commission on charges of conduct unbecoming a police officer.

WHEN HEIDT appeared yesterday before Judge Marvin J. Peters, he was represented by Atty. Richard Adler, who requested the continuance. Prosecuting in the case is Dan Miroballi, assistant state attorney for the district.

Along with other members of the Schaumburg department, Heidt was hired by Sears through the village to guard the store during construction and while it was being stocked with merchandise. Under the arrangement, Sears pays the village, which in turn pays the men for the work which is outside of normal police duties.

The charge against Heidt alleges he took such items as household mixers, golf clubs and fishing equipment from the store while he was on the special guard duty. The items allegedly were found in a U-Haul trailer Heidt was packing for his move to Las Vegas, Nev.

Heidt had been with the Schaumburg force five years, and Chief Conroy described his record with the force until his arrest as "good" or "average."

Report $400 In Jewelry Stolen

More than $400 in jewelry was reported stolen Monday when Mr. and Mrs. David C. Smith, 1808 Largo, Schaumburg, called Schaumburg police.

The jewelry was in a case on Mrs. Smith's dresser, they said. Police discovered footprints leading from the balcony outside the master bedroom of their home to the roof of 1818 Largo. Included in the list of stolen goods were a silver and pearl ring, a woman's watch, a platinum engagement and wedding ring set, and a gold ring with two garnets.

Hoffman Estates police also received a theft report Monday. They were notified of a theft in progress at John's Mobile station at Barrington Road and Rte. 58 at 1:27 p.m. When they arrived, the culprits had gone. Police report $146 was taken.

Hoffman Estates police yesterday were investigating a report of a break-in at the Dale House Restaurant.

Jaycee Charcoal Sale For Weekend

The Hoffman Estates Jaycees will conduct their annual charcoal sale this weekend. All purchases will be delivered to the buyer's home.

The Jaycees are selling 20 pound bags of Kingsford Charcoal at $1.65 per bag and quarts of starter fluid at 59 cents per quart, or 2 quarts for $1. Sherman Hamel, chairman of the event, will be taking advance orders for delivery. The number to call is 359-4517. Proceeds will be used for Jaycee-sponsored projects in the community.

X-Way Traffic Jams Are 'Worse Than Expected'

State highway officials yesterday renewed their pleas for motorists to find alternate routes to the Kennedy and Dan Ryan expressways, on which four-month construction projects have been started.

Traffic jams on both roads were "worse than expected," yesterday morning, according to a spokesman for the Illinois Division of Highways. The spokesman said apparently few commuters heeded advice to avoid the two routes.

Traffic on the Dan Ryan moved "surprisingly well" late yesterday afternoon, according to the Chicago Communications Center of the highway division. Conditions were expected to be worse today as construction activity expands.

The spokesman said southbound traffic moved fairly well on the Kennedy late yesterday afternoon to North Avenue. "When you reach North Avenue, it's like a brick wall," he said.

Westbound traffic on the Kennedy was reported backed up for over a mile at Des Plaines and River Roads late yesterday afternoon.

This Morning In Brief

The Nation

President Nixon has urged labor and management in the steel industry to write a new wage contract that would not price American steel out of the increasingly competitive world market. Management and Budget Director George Schultz said the President appealed "not only to their economic patriotism but beyond that to their sensitivity to their own self-interests." The present contract expires Aug. 1 and covers 460,000 workers.

Apollo 15 astronauts David R. Scott, Alfred M. Worden and James B. Irwin have started 20 days of launch site isolation in preparation for their flight to the moon July 26. They will, however, be the first moon landing crew that will not have to spend time in quarantine upon returning from the moon.

Louie (Satchmo) Armstrong died at his New York City home just two days after his 71st birthday. The death was unexpected although he had been near death in a hospital a few months ago. The former orphaned waif of the streets of New Orleans went on to become king of the jazz trumpet and won international acclaim.

Teamster sources in Miami Beach say the giant union plans to give imprisoned former president James Hoffa a $75,000 yearly pension and confer upon him the lifetime title of President Emeritus. There were reports, however, that Hoffa has asked for a lump settlement of $1 million. Hoffa resigned all union posts last month to improve his chances for parole from federal prison at Lewisburg, Pa., where he is serving 13 years for mail fraud and jury tampering.

An Argentine judge has turned an American Navy veteran and his Guatemalan girlfriend over to a five-judge panel to be tried for hijacking a Braniff jetliner from San Antonio, Tex., to Buenos Aires. No date was set for trial, but if convicted, air piracy carries a sentence of from 3 to 15 years. Still in question was whether the pair might be extradited to the United States or Mexico. The plane was hijacked Friday and it lasted 44 hours and took them 7,500 miles.

The World

Henry Kissinger, President Nixon's assistant for national security affairs, arrived in India amid elaborate security precautions and demonstrations against American weapon shipments to Pakistan. Kissinger was to spend two days in talks with Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, her top ministers and other Indian leaders. Some of these have made blunt statements about the government's displeasure with the arms shipments to Pakistan.

The State

One of five persons killed in the crash of a small plane near Philo in Champaign County has been identified as Vernor Saylor, leading jockey at River Downs race track in Cincinnati, Ohio. The plane crashed Monday and a widespread search began for the missing aircraft.

Vietnam's first typhoon of the year slammed into North Vietnam at more than 100 m.p.h. after high winds and rain stopped nearly all fighting in South Vietnam's northern region. U.S. Seventh Fleet ships sought shelter, and planes were grounded as Typhoon Harriet swept up the Vietnam coast packing 138 m.p.h. winds.

Theater Auditions Set At Library

40 KING SIZE puppets will take the audience at Thursday's summer concert in Hoffman Estates on a tour of the world and outer space. The Bob-

Open auditions will be held from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. July 19 and 20 in the Schaumburg Township Library for the premiere productions of the newly organized Schaumburg Festival Theater.

All persons auditioning will be asked to read from "Last Gasp," a playlet dealing with the ecological dilemma which has parts for six men and six women; "The Typists," a dramatic short play by Murray Schisgal which has parts for one man and one woman; and "Adaptation," an Elaine May comedy with roles for three men and one woman.

Two of the plays will be selected for presentation along with "The Brick and the Rose" and "Next" which will utilize the same casts as appeared in the Schaumburg Festival of Arts last month. The four plays, to be performed in rotation on Friday and Saturday nights, Aug. 20, 21, 27 and 28, will be directed by Raoul Johnson, a Schaumburg resident and an assistant professor and technical director-designer at Loyola University.

Negotiations for a facility in which to hold the plays are still in progress with Schaumburg High School and the Schaumburg Great Hall being considered.

ON JUNE 22 at 7:30 p.m., in the Schaumburg Township Library, the Festival Theater will hold its first monthly meeting. President is Sonja Leraas of Schaumburg; vice president is Bill Montello of Streamwood; secretary is Marian Waesche of Rolling Meadows; treasurer is Denis Ledgerwood of Schaumburg. Senior board members are Rudy Waesche of Rolling Meadows and Shirley Ryan and Monti Leraas of Schaumburg. Junior board members are Chris Fikert of Hanover Park and Tom Fitzgerald of Palatine.

Membership in the Festival Theater is open to residents of all communities, teenagers as well as adults.

"What we hope will distinguish us from other theaters will be our attempt to present a broad sampling of all kinds of theater from choral plays to monologues, to one-acters, to melodramas, to full length productions. Operating on a year-round basis, we can offer our audiences dramatic production even in the summer and we plan to produce everything from Shakespeare to Schisgal and Moliere to May," said Mrs. Leraas.

Two plays already scheduled for production are "Summertime" by Ron Cowen and "The Effect of Gamma Rays on Man-In-The-Moon Marigolds" by Paul Zindel.

DIRECTORS INTERESTED in working on these plays, or in presenting other plays for consideration are invited to attend the July 22 meeting or to submit a resume and list of plays they wish to direct, to Mrs. Leraas, 308 Cloverdale Ln., Schaumburg.

An appeal is also made to anyone knowing of a place where the Festival Theater can store a large quantity of display units and sets.

"The Leraas garage just isn't big enough for everything and we would be grateful to anyone who could provide us with storage space gratis or even on a monthly rental basis," Mrs. Leraas said.

Anyone having storage space available is asked to call Mrs. Leraas at 894-2380.

Walden Office Construction 'All-Weather'

The first unit of Walden Office Square, now under construction in Schaumburg is an "all-weather" project, according to John Skanderup, president of Pepper Construction Co., general contractor.

By "all-weather," Skanderup refers to flexibility in the design by architect Richard M. Barancik that could enable crews to work in all types of weather. Construction sequences can be adjusted to seasonal requirements, he said.

"On the building, starting in February, we had holes drilled through frozen ground for 38 foundation caissons," Skanderup said. "Then, the structural steel was erected. It was completed and the concrete slab floors were poured in mid-May, after the weather had warmed."

Exterior facing made of pre-cast concrete columns, spandrels and mullions (frames for openings), was trucked to the site. Hoisted to enclose the steel I-beams of the basic structure, they were squared, plumbed, clamped in position and welded into place to form the off-white, exposed-aggregate, finished exterior.

But the order of pouring floors and facing the exterior could easily have been reversed, depending on the weather, Skanderup said.

Because two more, identical buildings are planned for the development, the all-weather capability is suited perfectly to Walden Office Square, according to Howard Berg of Romanek-Gotlib and Co., leasing agent.

"If a single tenant were to take the entire first building, which is a distinct possibility, ground would have to be broken for the second and possibly third on an expedited basis. With Walden's flexibility of construction, winter weather wouldn't delay space availability to other tenants," Berg said.

Design of the building also provides for wide interior spans, to allow for the greatest possible flexibility in space-planning for tenants' needs on the 15,000 square foot floors.

Urge Return Of Health Tests

The parents of children entering kindergarten and fifth grades in Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 elementary schools, Aug. 31, are urged to have their child's physical and dental examinations forms returned to school by the new semester's start.

Students transferring to Dist. 54 schools from out of state are also required to have physical and dental exams, regardless of grade. Proof of a recent physical exam from out-of-state may be used to waive the requirement.

Illinois statutes require medical examinations prior to, or upon entrance, to school. Special attention to immunization of children by the doctor is also urged and required. Examination forms have been distributed to incoming kindergarten and fifth grade students prior to the closing of school in June.

THE PARENTS of children who recently moved to the area may obtain needed forms from their assigned school office. If the office is closed, the forms are available at Dist. 54's administration center, 804 W. Rode Road, Schaumburg. For more information call 529-4200.

Completed forms may be returned to school on book fee day, Aug. 23. The first day of grade school classes is Aug. 31, except for kindergarten students who begin September 3.

Trustees To Study Sewage Treatment Plant Program

Hanover Park Trustees will study DuPage County plan to close down the more than 90 separate sewage treatment plants now operating in the County and institute a nine-plant county sewage plant program before they take action to expand their own Hanover Park plant.

Village officials considered a report submitted by Village Engineer Larry Grindel Thursday that shows the facility serving the Greenbrook Development in DuPage County must be expanded if future DuPage development is to come.

Grindel said the first expansion he proposes to handle 4,000 more residents should be adequate until 1973; the cost of the expansion is estimated at $450,000. A second expansion that may be necessary in 1973 or '74 would be for an additional 8,000 population figure and would cost about $570,000. These expansions would not constitute the plant's possible full capacity and one additional smaller expansion could be made, he added.

TRUSTEE DAVID BUGH asked the delay in action. He felt DuPage County might be successful in its request for the program and the village might spend funds now for expansion they could not utilize.

Grindel, Village Atty. William Davies and Stanley Grosshandler, an attorney in the audience, said the DuPage plan, under the auspices of the Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission, and deferred until a full session of the legislature, was poorly written and the validity of the bill was questioned.

Grosshandler said no plans are being formulated and there is no authorization or support of the DuPage County request. Davies said a recent referendum showed a resounding defeat of the proposal by DuPage County.

Both attorneys and engineer urged development of the present facility to assure orderly growth in DuPage County.

Village Retains Auditors

The auditing firm of Goldman and Weiss, 77 W. Washington St., Chicago, present auditors for the village of Hanover Park, have been rehired to conduct this year's audit.

Village officials Thursday selected the Goldman firm after hearing proposals and receiving cost estimates from Goldman and three others.

Goldman proposed to do the audit for between $1,600 to $2,300; the other bidders, Thomas Havey and Co., gave a bid of $2,000 to $2,500; S. D. Leidesdorf, not to exceed $4,000 with added expenses; and the Touche Ross and Co. auditing firm for a price not to exceed $7,000.

Trustee William Rietz, who previously asked for the review of several firms and sought proposals from at least seven firms reported that the finance committee recommended the board choose between Goldman and Havey after receiving bids.

Youths Treated For Weekend Injuries

Two local children were treated at Alexian Brothers Medical Center, Elk Grove Village, over the weekend for injuries received when one was struck by a horse-drawn wagon and the other by a car.

Jeffrey S. Schaeffer, five, son of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Schaeffer, 534 Salem Dr., Schaumburg, sustained contusions to the head and one shoulder when he was struck by a horse and wagon participating in the Hoffman Estates Fourth of July parade. Jeffrey was seated in a chair in front of 278 Illinois Blvd. when the horse, driven by Martin J. Keyes, 19, of 364 Bode Rd., Hoffman Estates, became frightened by traffic, and ran onto the sidewalk and lawn.

Andrea Thompson, seven, of 113 Kingman Ln., Hoffman Estates, sustained abrasions and a small laceration when the bicycle she rode collided with a car driven by Patrick J. Smith, 18, of 189 Illinois Blvd., Hoffman Estates. The incident occurred Friday afternoon.

Park District Begins New Track Program

Tryouts for the Schaumburg Park District track program, a new offering in this summer's recreational series, were held Tuesday at Civic Park.

Track team members will compete in dual meets, Schaumburg Olympics and Paddock Olympics.

First dual meet of the season is scheduled for Tuesday, July 13 at 10 a.m. at Civic Park.

Events included are the 50-yard dash, long jump, girls jump rope, boys softball throw, kickball and other team activities.

Boys and girls eight to 13 years old are being encouraged to join the team under the direction and coaching of Gary Campana, a Drake University student working with the park district this summer.

For additional information contact park offices, 894-3258 between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. weekdays.

Handicapped Swim May Be Scheduled

If sufficient interest is shown, a swim class for handicapped children in Hanover Park will be scheduled this summer.

Park activities for handicapped children should be included in the district's program, Hanover Park resident Mrs. Joseph Nucci told commissioners recently.

Mrs. Nucci has three sons with physical handicaps.

Mrs. Nucci said, at her suggestion the commissioners agreed to schedule swimming lessons for handicapped children, including those that are blind, deaf, mentally or physically impaired, if sufficient interest is shown.

The instruction would be on a one instructor to one student ratio, Mrs. Nucci said.

Parents interested in enrolling handicapped children in swim classes should call the district office at 837-2468.

Hughes Wins Award For Advanced Study

John A. Hughes, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Hughes, 282 Kent Rd., Hoffman Estates, has accepted a University Fellowship award for advanced study at the University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign. The stipends are awarded in recognition of scholarly achievement to enable students to pursue graduate studies and research.

Win At Bridge

by Oswald and James Jacoby

When today's hand was played at the Louisville Regional in April, every South player made the small slam in spades, but practically no one bid it. Dave Siebert of Little Rock and Jack Blair of Tulsa did and we feel their sequence is worth study.

Dave's spade overall was normal and Jack decided to explore with a two-diamond cue bid. He was going to wind up in spades, but wanted to explore slam possibilities. Dave's two-spade bid tempered and Jack tried three clubs. The cue bid had initiated a forcing sequence, so he wasn't worried about being dropped there.

Dave's hand had suddenly improved, so he bid three diamonds. Jack was not ready to raise spades as yet so he tried three hearts to get further information. Dave showed his club support. He didn't know if Jack really had clubs, but he didn't care because Jack would know.

This club raise was enough for Jack to take full charge. He Blackwooded and then bid six spades. The bidding is well worthy of study. It is complicated, but expert bridge is.

There are two other points of interest. If Dave had really been void of diamonds, he would have responded six diamonds.

Businessman Is Fined $420 For Violations Here

Judge John J. Limparis in Arlington Heights District Court yesterday fined one Wheeling businessman $420 for building and business license violations and continued the trial of another businessman on similar charges for two weeks.

Limparis handed down the fine to Les Fonk, proprietor of Les' Barber Shop at 757 W. Dundee Road.

In the case of Jerry Fuller, operator of the Sandwich Haven Restaurant at 759 W. Dundee Road, the judge continued the hearing until July 20 despite strenuous objections by the Village of Wheeling.

The judge ordered Fuller to be "in full compliance or at least substantial compliance on almost all of the points" the village has objected to in the business by the next hearing.

LIMPARIS SAID that if Fuller were not in compliance with the village building and business requirements at that time he would have to have "a valid reason or at least a good legal reason" for not complying.

Fuller has been cited once a day since mid-June for a total of 41 different tickets. The charges include operating a business without a license, operating a restaurant without a grease trap on the sink, and having doors that open inward in a business that is considered an "unsafe hazard."

Limparis granted the continuance after a pre-trial conference in the judges chambers with Bieber, Fuller's attorney, and the Wheeling village prosecutor Donald Norman.

Fuller said publicly the village citations were a planned harassment of him for his involvement in the Wheeling Independent Party's write-in campaign in recent village elections.

Limparis gave Fuller a warning that the court would not allow him to set himself up "as a supreme court" in deciding which of the village ordinances are reasonable.

LIMPARIS THEN turned the attention of the court to the 22 citations issued to Les' Barber Shop for operating without a business license and operating with improper exits because the rear doors are locked and the front door opens inward.

Bieber testified at length in the case against Fonk, noting the village had held back the barber shop's license for the violations of the door requirements.

Fonk introduced testimony that he paid a deposit for a business license and that his efforts to get the building owner to meet with Bieber had been unsuccessful.

Bieber said that village ordinances apply to the person operating the business, not the building owner. In addition, he said he had repeatedly offered to meet with the woman who owns the building if Fonk would arrange the meeting.

AFTER LIMPARIS announced he would find Fonk guilty on both charges, Norman said that the court should know that in "aggravation" of the case, Fonk had been found guilty of the felony offense of gambling last year in Niles.

Fonk disputed Norman's statement as untrue in the courtroom and said after the hearing the gambling incident was merely a misdemeanor charge.

Limparis said that anyway, the court was not interested in any prior conviction information.

Despite Norman's request for a moderate fine, the judge then imposed the $420 fine on Fonk for two of the citations and the village agreed to drop the other 20 duplicate citations "with leave to reinstate" the cases of Fonk continued to violate the village ordinances.

Limparis told Fonk he could not operate his business until the village granted him a license and gave him 90 days to pay the fine.

In cross questioning Fonk brought out that he had repeatedly told Bieber that he was only leasing the shop and that the owner of the building refused to allow him to make structural changes in the building.

'Alphabet People In New Reader'

Days Of 'Dick And Jane' Are Gone

by SUE JACOBSON

The old days of learning to read through the stories of Dick and Jane have vanished for first graders at Walt Whitman School in Wheeling.

Instead, they're reading all about the "alphabet people" in the Alpha One reading program.

The program was developed by two New York teachers, Elaine Reiss and Rita Friedman. The two women worked with the cast and technicians of the highly successful children's television show, "Sesame Street," to develop the reading program.

Alpha One reading materials include reading books and records that tell stories about 26 little "alphabet people."

Brightly-colored cards featuring illustrations of these imaginary characters, workbooks and alphabet puppets are included in the set of materials.

THE ALPHA ONE reading program was started at Whitman last February as a pilot program for first graders who had difficulty learning to read. The program has so pleased the Whitman staff that it was continued in summer school and will be expanded this fall to include all first graders at Whitman.

Alpha One "makes reading fun," according to Whitman first grade teacher Virginia Oleson. "So many other reading programs are so dull and dry that it's difficult to hold the children's interest. For those who are quick to learn to read, holding their interest isn't that much of a problem. But for the slower students it is."

Alpha One students start by learning to pronounce vowel sounds correctly, as vowels traditionally give beginning readers the most trouble. Records that tell stories about the vowel alphabet characters reinforce vowel sounds for young ears. The records are also fun for the children to listen to, said Mrs. Oleson.

"It's amazing the way these kids remember these stories and talk about them. They talk about the little people as if they were real," said Mrs. Oleson.

CONSONANT SOUNDS are next on the Alpha One learning agenda, and the children here are introduced to 21 new consonant characters and many new stories on records and in their reading books.

Imaginative workbook exercises help children "sound out" — or decode — new words. There are such workbook innovations as the "belonging boxes" for letters that together make special sounds, such as "cl" and "sp," and thus, "belong together."

Words usually considered too difficult for first graders such as "obstinate," are introduced to them in Alpha One.

"They're learning many difficult words, this way, with few problems," according to Mrs. Oleson.

The Alpha One curriculum also lends itself to arts and crafts projects. Recently the students made "mirrors" of cardboard and aluminum foil as an art project so they could watch themselves while pronouncing the sounds of the alphabet.

Whitman principal Catherine Samsel is as enthusiastic as the teachers about Alphabet puppets, representing letters of the alphabet, are used by children in the Alpha One reading program at Walt Whitman School in Wheeling to act out stories. The puppet plays are designed to reinforce vowel and consonant sounds. Demonstrating the puppets are Scott Leikam and Darlene Nelson.

$60,000 For Creek Work Is Approved

The Illinois Division of Waterways is expected to spend $60,000 on dredging, widening, and cleaning operations for Wheeling Drainage ditch and Buffalo creek this coming year.

The funds for the work received final approval from the Illinois House of representatives at 5:30 a.m. last Thursday in the final hours of the legislative session.

The signature of Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie is all that is needed to make the funds a reality, and Ogilvie is expected to approve the bill since the funds were included in his proposed budget.

The $60,000 allocated for work on the creek in Lake and Cook Counties was combined into a package bill which included various other Illinois division of waterways projects for the coming year.

BECAUSE THE bill was put into the combined form in the senate, a reapproval by the Illinois House was necessary in the final hours before the legislature adjourned.

State Rep. Eugene Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights, was chief sponsor of the bill. He explained the House had hoped to take the creek section out of the combined bill and pass it separately. The House appointed a conference committee to work with the Senate on the bill, but the senate adjourned before a meeting could be held.

The House then passed the package bill.

The exact uses for the money appropriated by the state for Wheeling and Buffalo Grove have not been decided.

In a recent letter to Wheeling officials, John Guillou, chief engineer for the Illinois Division of Waterways, told village officials that he planned to meet with them and Harza Engineering Co., the village's consulting engineer on flood problems, to decide how the $60,000 should be spent to provide the most flood relief for the area.

BOTH GUILLOU and Schlickman have given village officials hope that annual appropriations for work on the creek can be expected in the coming years. Guillou had estimated last summer that a total of $2.4 million would be needed to complete the flood control work on the creek.

The work on the legislation began last summer with a local petition and letter writing campaign to encourage the state legislature to provide funds for the work.

The campaign was instigated by a visit Guillou made to Wheeling following the massive floods in June, 1970.

Wheeling officials recently wrote letters of thanks to Schlickman and to state Reps. Eugenia Chapman, D-Arlington Heights, and David Regner, R-Mount Prospect, who worked as co-sponsors for the bill.

State Sen. John Graham, R-Barrington, handled the bill in the senate after it received its first house approval.

Wheeling police are investigating the theft of between $600 and $700 in cash from the Schlitz Warehouse at 435 S. Wheeling Rd., last weekend.

The theft which occurred between 3 p.m. Saturday and 9:56 a.m. Sunday included money taken from two separate offices in the warehouse building and the theft of an additional undetermined amount of petty cash.

The Nation

President Nixon has urged labor and management in the steel industry to write a new wage contract that would not price American steel out of the increasingly competitive world market. Management and Budget Director George Schultz said the President appealed "not only to their economic patriotism but beyond that to their sensitivity to their own self-interests." The present contract expires Aug. 1 and covers 450,000 workers.

Hoffa resigned all union posts last month to improve his chances for parole from federal prison at Lewisburg, Pa., where he is serving 13 years for mail fraud and jury tampering.

Henry Kissinger, President Nixon's assistant for national security affairs, arrived in India amid elaborate security precautions and demonstrations against American weapon shipments to Pakistan. An Argentine judge has turned an American Navy veteran and his Guatemalan girlfriend over to a five-judge panel to be tried for hijacking a Braniff jetliner from San Antonio, Tex., to Buenos Aires. No date was set for trial, but if convicted, air piracy carries a sentence of from 3 to 15 years. Still in question was whether the pair might be extradited to the United States or Mexico. The plane was hijacked Friday and it lasted 44 hours and took them 7,500 miles.

Annexation Battle Grows

If Wheeling annexes land within the proposed City of Prospect Heights, that annexation may later be declared invalid, according to Prospect Heights officials advocating incorporation for their community.

Wheeling has taken preliminary steps to annex three gas stations, a small shopping center and the Lutheran Church of the Good Shepherd at Hintz and Elmhurst roads. Members of the Wheeling Village Board voted last week to survey the area in preparation for annexation.

The parcels are included in an incorporation proposal that was dismissed from the Cook County Circuit Court last week. The incorporation petitioners say they will take their case to the appellate court, however.

"If the appellate court rules in our favor, and the incorporation is approved in a referendum, then all annexations since the date of the original petition would be invalid," said Jack Gilligan, a leader of the incorporation movement.

HOWEVER, ATTORNEYS representing the two municipalities that objected to the incorporation petition in court, said the municipalities are not restricted in annexing land within the proposed city's boundaries. Moreover, they say, these annexations would not necessarily be declared invalid if the appellate court upheld the incorporation petition.

The attorneys are Paul Hamer representing Wheeling, and Jack Siegel, village attorney for Arlington Heights.

Hamer disagrees with Gilligan's contention, pointing out, "There is no case law showing that the annexations would be invalid. Wheeling is free to annex land until a time when the lower court decision is reversed and a mandate is issued."

"If a property owner in the area of the proposed city sought annexation to Arlington Heights, the village would not hold up the incorporation because of an appeal of the incorporation petition," said Siegel. "The incorporation petition does not freeze everything. I don't know if the annexations could later be declared invalid if the appellate court reversed the county court's ruling."

ACCORDING TO DONALD Kreger, representing the incorporation petitioners, "If the case isn't reversed by the appellate court, then the annexations could be successful. But if the case is reversed and the incorporation is successful then the annexations wouldn't be valid."

The Wheeling Village Board, at the request of Trustee John Koeppen, began taking steps toward annexing the unincorporated land while the incorporation petition was still before the county court. Koeppen said he had proposed the annexation "a long time ago, and had no thought about the incorporation one way or the other. I honestly thought the land wasn't included in the proposed city."

The incorporation petition is not now before any court. However, the petitioners may file a notice of appeal within 30 days after the circuit court ruling. That action would place the matter before the appellate court.

Concerning any annexation attempts while the case is before the courts, Kreger said, "Case laws show incorporation would take precedence over annexation while it is pending in court. No property can be disconnected from the proposed city while the incorporation petition is before the court. If certain conditions are met, property may be disconnected after the incorporation."

HAMER SAID, "property owners may petition the court to disconnect from the proposed city if they're on the outskirts during the pending of the incorporation suit. I don't think any court would stop them."

Wheeling and Arlington Heights objected to the incorporation on the grounds that the petitioners failed to obtain the villages' consent, which they said is required in state statutes. Settling a discrepancy in state statutes, the judge upheld the municipalities' objection. The judge also refused to grant the petitioners an appeal bond, which would, in effect, freeze all annexations of the land in the proposed city.

River, Euclid Zoned For Apartments

Rezoning of 10 acres at River Road and Euclid Avenue in Prospect Heights for apartments was approved yesterday by the Cook County Board.

The county board followed a recommendation made by the Cook County Zoning Board of Appeals in its decision. Commissioner Floyd Fuller, of Des Plaines, was one of two commissioners who voted against the rezoning.

This is the second time in two years George Martin Sloan, owner of the property, has asked the county to rezone his land from single-family residential to multiple family. The first time the county denied his request.

Last year, almost 100 residents objected to Sloan's proposal. But this time the only objectors were the villages of Wheeling and Mount Prospect.

EARLIER SEVERAL community leaders indicated they would ask the county board to postpone its decision until the Mount Prospect Village Board makes a ruling on an annexation petition. Residents in the "new town" area of Prospect Heights (including Sloan's land) have petitioned for annexation to Mount Prospect. However the annexation petitioners have taken no steps to block the rezoning.

If the village approves the annexation petition before Sloan secures a building permit from the county, then the village could reverse the county's decision, according to those connected with the annexation effort.

Currently a feasibility study on the annexation is underway. Mount Prospect Mayor Robert Teichert has indicated the village board would begin deliberations on the annexation proposal by the end of July.

According to one source, the only legal recourse residents have at this time is to file suit. But there are no indications currently that the residents plan to dispute the rezoning.

Sloan has proposed building eight three-story apartment buildings with a total of 192 living units on the site. Approximately one-third of the units, 64 apartments, will be one-bedroom. The remainder will be two-bedroom types. Estimated rental fee is $175 per month for one-bedroom apartments and between $265 and $285 for two-bedroom units. About one and a half parking spaces per unit are included in Sloan's plans.

Combined Concert Slated Thursday

A combined concert by the cadet and concert bands at James Fenimore Cooper Junior High in Buffalo Grove will be presented at 8 p.m. Thursday in the school gymnasium.

The bands will play selections of rock, popular and classical music. The bands will be directed by David Leigh.

Following the concert, the Dist. 21 summer school modern dance class will present a program of modern dances. The class is under the direction of Renee Simon.

The program is open to the public without charge.

Praise, Criticism At Meeting

Wheeling Trustee John Koeppen praised one local merchant and criticized another at a Wheeling Village Board meeting.

Koeppen, who heads the board's real estate and zoning committee, cited the remodeling of McDonald's Drive-In at 188 E. Dundee Rd. as an example of "beautification" of the village.

Koeppen said that the addition of trees and grass along the front of the McDonald's property was to be commended.

"This could be a start. If we could get all the merchants to provide greenery like that," Koeppen said.

Village Pres. Ted C. Scanlon urged Koeppen not to write a congratulatory letter to McDonalds on the work until ingress and egress signs and parking lot lights have been installed at the restaurant.

IN A CONTINUATION of his comments, Koeppen sharply criticized the Dunhurst shopping center at the southwest corner of Dundee and Elmhurst Road.

Koeppen said that the "greenery" placed around the light poles in the shopping center is "an insult" to the village.

"If this is the best they can do for this town, that's the last vote they'll get from me," Koeppen said.

The village board recently rezoned the property in the shopping center and as part of the proceedings received a promise for added greenery from shopping center proprietor Howard Lipsky.

Scanlon told Koeppen, "I support you 100 per cent, John."

SCHAUMBURG JAYCEE Barry Goldberg, left, gave credit where credit was due when he allowed Bob Bogart of Buffalo Grove to fill in a raffle ticket from the Schaumburg Jaycee Carnival and mail his dollar in later.

er. Bogart and his daughter Mary Francis will enjoy the prize, a $1,800 camper trailer, on a family vacation this week.

Man Of Honor Wins Camper At Carnival

A man of honor has won the $1,800 camper trailer raffled at the Schaumburg Jaycee carnival recently, said Barry Goldberg, vice president.

Goldberg was at the Illinois Jaycees state convention several weeks ago when he stopped Bob Bogart, a Buffalo Grove Jaycee, and attempted to sell him a raffle ticket for the camper.

"I'd buy a ticket, but I don't have a dollar," said Bogart.

Goldberg, recognizing a Jaycee as a man of integrity, said "Fill in the ticket and send me a buck when you think of it."

The ticket was taken, and about three weeks later Goldberg received $1 in the mail from Bogart, whom Goldberg had never met before the convention.

Bogart's veracity paid off when his ticket was drawn June 27.

"I THINK it's great," Bogart said after receiving his camper last week.

"We're taking a trip to New England this week," he added. The trip was planned before Bogart won the camper and said he didn't plan on using a trailer until winning the raffle.

"It sleeps eight," he added. The camper will be pretty filled too. On the trip, Bogart is taking his wife, two daughters, his son and a daughter's friend.

Bogart said he didn't know anything about campers until now, but he's looking forward to using his prize.

Patrolman Granted Week's Continuance

William F. Heidt, 31, of 962 Valewood Dr. Bartlett, was granted a week's continuance, until Tuesday, when he appeared yesterday in Cook County Circuit Court in Niles.

Heidt, a patrolman with the Schaumburg Police Department, was charged by that department with grand theft a week ago yesterday. He allegedly stole $1,000 to $1,100 worth of merchandise from the Sears Roebuck and Co. store being prepared for opening at Woodfield Mall. The thefts allegedly occurred over a week and a half just prior to Heidt's arrest.

The patrolman had submitted his resignation from the Schaumburg force three weeks prior to his arrest, and it was to have become effective last Wednesday. Police Chief Martin Conroy rejected the resignation when Heidt was arrested, and placed the patrolman on suspension. Heidt is to request a hearing before the village fire and police commission on charges of conduct unbecoming a police officer.

WHEN HEIDT appeared yesterday before Judge Marvin J. Peters, he was represented by Atty. Richard Adler, who requested the continuance. Prosecuting in the case is Dan Miroballi, assistant state attorney for the district.

Along with other members of the Schaumburg department, Heidt was hired by Sears through the village to guard the store during construction and while it was being stocked with merchandise. Under the arrangement, Sears pays the village, which in turn pays the men for the work which is outside of normal police duties.

The charge against Heidt alleges he took such items as household mixers, golf clubs and fishing equipment from the store while he was on the special guard duty. The items allegedly were found in a U-Haul trailer Heidt was packing for his move to Las Vegas, Nev.

Heidt had been with the Schaumburg force five years, and Chief Conroy described his record with the force until his arrest as "good" or "average."

Robbery Victim Reported In 'Good Condition'

A 54-year-old Wheeling man who was hit over the head and robbed this weekend at Arlington Park Towers in Arlington Heights was reported yesterday in good condition at Holy Family Hospital.

Hospital spokesmen said Richard Blass, of 16 E. Old Willow Rd., is in an improved condition since he was admitted shortly after the robbery Saturday night.

Arlington Heights police are now looking for a suspect who allegedly knocked Blass unconscious and robbed him of his wallet, containing $250, keys, and overcoat.

Police said Blass was apparently drinking in the Top of the Towers lounge when he met a man who invited Blass to a party in his room, where Blass was then robbed.

Police said the man they are seeking registered under a phony name and left the hotel immediately after the robbery.

Upon investigation, police found Blass' overcoat in the hotel room, but no trace of his wallet or other personal belongings.

Action On Gripes Over Ditch Slowed By Legal Hassle

Buffalo Grove residents have complained, so far with little success, about the dangers of a water-filled ditch in the undeveloped portion of the Strathmore subdivision.

Neighbors fear that a youngster may drown or be injured swimming in the ditch, which one resident estimated was 40 feet deep.

Action on the complaints has been slow, apparently because the ditch is on land involved in School Dist. 96's condemnation suit against Levitt and Sons, Inc.

When the area was inspected by the Herald after learning of the complaints Friday, two youths were swimming in the L-shaped ditch. The excavation is about 25 feet wide for most of its 200-foot length.

The dirt banks drop off steeply to the muddy water. Near the banks, debris

There are no fences or signs cautioning potential swimmers to keep out.

Police Chief Harold Smith said yesterday he does not have the authorization to prevent children from swimming in the ditch. Smith said he cannot act until he receives a complaint from Levitt and Sons.

"I DON'T HAVE a law to go on," he said. Residents have complained to the police and to the Herald about the potentially dangerous situation.

The situation has been discussed at recent village board meetings, and School Dist. 96, which has condemned the land where the ditch is located, has agreed to allow the ditch to be filled in. The district had been reluctant to allow the action because of pending litigation.

The ditch is situated on part of the 15 condemned acres, east of Indian Spring Lane and north of Denham Lane.

Smith said he wrote a letter to Levitt last year asking that the ditch be filled in. According to Smith, Levitt refused stating that the land was involved in condemnation proceedings.

At a recent board meeting, Village Pres. Gary Armstrong said he would contact Levitt and Sons and ask that the ditch be filled in. As of yesterday morning it appeared that no work had been done on the ditch.

X-Way Traffic Jams Are 'Worse Than Expected'

State highway officials yesterday renewed their pleas for motorists to find alternate routes to the Kennedy and Dan Ryan expressways, on which four-month construction projects have been started.

Traffic jams on both roads were "worse than expected," yesterday morning, according to a spokesman for the Illinois Division of Highways. The spokesman said apparently few commuters heeded advice to avoid the two routes.

Traffic on the Dan Ryan moved "surprisingly well" late yesterday afternoon, according to the Chicago Communications Center of the highway division. Conditions were expected to be worse today as construction activity expands.

The spokesman said southbound traffic moved fairly well on the Kennedy late yesterday afternoon to North Avenue. "When you reach North Avenue, it's like a brick wall," he said.

Westbound traffic on the Kennedy was reported backed up for over a mile at Des Plaines and River Roads late yesterday afternoon.

'Alphabet People In New Reader'

by SUE JACOBSON

The old days of learning to read through the stories of Dick and Jane have vanished for first graders at Walt Whitman School in Wheeling.

Instead, they're reading all about the "alphabet people" in the Alpha One reading program.

The program was developed by two New York teachers, Elaine Reiss and Rita Friedman. The two women worked with the cast and technicians of the highly successful children's television show, "Sesame Street," to develop the reading program.

Alpha One reading materials include reading books and records that tell stories about 26 little "alphabet people."

Brightly-colored cards featuring illustrations of these imaginary characters, workbooks and alphabet puppets are included in the set of materials.

THE ALPHA ONE reading program was started at Whitman last February as a pilot program for first graders who had difficulty learning to read. The program has so pleased the Whitman staff that it was continued in summer school and will be expanded this fall to include all first graders at Whitman.

Stories center around the antics of such characters as "Little Miss I," who's forever itching, "Mr. H," with his horrible hair, and "Little Miss E," who's a great exerciser.

Alpha One "makes reading fun," according to Whitman first grade teacher Virginia Oleson. "So many other reading programs are so dull and dry that it's difficult to hold the children's interest. For those who are quick to learn to read, holding their interest isn't that much of a problem. But for the slower students it is."

Alpha One students start by learning to pronounce vowel sounds correctly, as vowels traditionally give beginning readers the most trouble. Records that tell stories about the vowel alphabet characters reinforce the vowel sounds for young ears. The records are also fun for the children to listen to, said Mrs. Oleson.

"It's amazing the way these kids remember these stories and talk about them. They talk about the little people as if they were real," said Mrs. Oleson.

CONSONANT SOUNDS are next on the Alpha One learning agenda, and the children here are introduced to 21 new consonant characters and many new stories on records and in their reading books.

Imaginative workbook exercises help children "sound out" — or decode — new words. There are such workbook innovations as the "belonging boxes" for letters that together make special sounds, such as "cl" and "sp," and thus, "belong together."

Words usually considered too difficult for first graders such as "obstinate," are introduced to them in Alpha One.

"They're learning many difficult words, this way, with few problems," according to Mrs. Oleson.

The Alpha One curriculum also lends itself to arts and crafts projects. Recently the students made "mirrors" of cardboard and aluminum foil as an art project so they could watch themselves while pronouncing the sounds of the alphabet.

Whitman principal Catherine Samsel is as enthusiastic as the teachers about Alpha One. She was sold on the program after seeing a demonstration on Alpha One last winter.

"IT'S A FUN type program. Many methods of teaching reading give no rules for pronunciation. This program has a story to illustrate every sound and the rules that govern pronunciation," she said.

Alpha One students haven't been tested yet to compare their reading performance with that of students in other reading programs. However, Mrs. Samsel believes that when the students are tested next year, the Alpha One students will test higher than those not in the program.

The Whitman PTA is assisting the staff at the school in extending Alpha One to all first graders in the fall. About $500, raised from last year's PTA projects, will be used to purchase Alpha One reading materials.

"We're all looking forward to next fall when all our first graders will learn with Alpha One. And if we're successful, I'll be pushing to have it adopted throughout the district," said Mrs. Samsel.

$60,000 For Creek Work Is Approved

The Illinois Division of Waterways is expected to spend $60,000 on dredging, widening, and cleaning operations for Wheeling Drainage ditch and Buffalo creek this coming year.

The funds for the work received final approval from the Illinois House of representatives at 5:30 a.m. last Thursday in the final hours of the legislative session.

The signature of Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie is all that is needed to make the funds a reality, and Ogilvie is expected to approve the bill since the funds were included in his proposed budget.

The $60,000 allocated for work on the creek in Lake and Cook Counties was combined into a package bill which included various other Illinois division of waterways projects for the coming year.

State Rep. Eugene Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights, was chief sponsor of the bill. He explained the House had hoped to take the creek section out of the combined bill and pass it separately. The House appointed a conference committee to work with the Senate on the bill, but the senate adjourned before a meeting could be held.

The House then passed the package bill.

The exact uses for the money appropriated by the state for Wheeling and Buffalo Grove have not been decided.

In a recent letter to Wheeling officials, John Guillo, chief engineer for the Illinois Division of Waterways, told village officials that he planned to meet with them and Harza Engineering Co., the village's consulting engineer on flood problems, to decide how the $60,000 should be spent to provide the most flood relief for the area.

State Sen. John Graham, R-Barrington, handled the bill in the senate after it received its first house approval.

Six Homes Will Be Leveled For Roadway In Year

Residents in six homes along East Palatine Road in Winston Park have about one year to find new places to live before reconstruction will begin by the State Division of Highways on widening the road.

Final design plans on the road widening will not be completed for two or three months, according to Ed Kramarz of the division of highways.

When the plans are completed to the satisfaction of the state design department, they will be turned over to the right of way department of the highway division, which will start the machinery for acquisition of the land.

Kramarz said descriptions of the plans must first be sent to independent appraisers, who will then inspect the properties needed to be acquired and set a value on them.

"All of the homeowners will get a fair market value for their land and homes," he said.

Actual appraising of the six homes would not take place until about eight months, Kramarz estimated. After another month to allow the state division to review the appraisals, negotiations will begin with the individual property owners.

FOLLOWING NEGOTIATIONS, each resident will be given approximately three months to make arrangements to leave their homes and relocate themselves, Kramarz said.

"We can't start construction on the road until all the families have been removed and have found themselves another place to live," he said.

Plans for Palatine Road call for reconstruction from just east of Rohlwing Road to near Rte. 53, making it four 12-foot lanes with three four-foot medians.

Frontage roads along Palatine Road will be 22 feet wide and will branch off the road and curve around to meet Winston Drive further north and south of the intersection.

Objection was raised by property owners over the approved plan because of the loss in property. However, according to some property owners, they decided to stop protesting and accept the state's plans because the road work would be done anyway.

Three homes on Palatine Road, two homes on Winston Drive and one on Williams Drive are affected by the construction plans.

The widening of East Palatine Road will expand the existing road, called a junior superhighway, further west.

Former superintendent of schools for High School Dist. 211 was recently honored by the Palatine Lions Club. It was erroneously reported last week in The Herald that he had received the award from the Kiwanis.

Four new officers have just joined the Palatine Police Department. Kenneth Mrosek, Larry Kamka, Lance Bedini and John Byrnes have all been promoted after a six-week course at the University of Illinois.

WHO SHOULD BE putting this man into the ambulance, a fire department or private ambulance crew? Palatine officials face this question

New Eligible Voters Are Not Rushing To Register

When 18, 19 and 20-year-olds were given the right to vote in all elections last Wednesday, there was no influx of new registered voters, according to reports from Palatine and Rolling Meadows officials.

On Wednesday, the Ohio legislature ratified the 26th amendment to the U. S. Constitution making persons 18-years-old and over eligible to vote in local elections. The young voters were allowed to cast ballots in national elections in January.

With passage of the new legislation, 721 more residents will be allowed to vote in Rolling Meadows and 1,056 additional in Palatine, according to U. S. Census figures.

Mrs. Margaret Chapman, Palatine township clerk, reported "very few new voters signed up last week." She estimated four or five new voters between 18 and 20 were registered.

Since January, Mrs. Chapman estimated about 90 additional persons were registered in Palatine Township. "I got the real crowd from Palatine High School," she commented. "An entire class came over one day to register."

NOT A SINGLE new voter was registered at Rolling Meadows city hall and one at Palatine village hall late last week.

Rolling Meadows newly sanctioned voters who are residents of Elk Grove Township (those living south of Central Road) didn't rush to become registered either last week.

Elk Grove Township officials reported no 18, 19 or 20 year-olds became new voters after Wednesday's ruling.

The 26th amendment allows not only the lowering of voting age requirements in city, village and national elections, but also allows the lowering of age requirements in park board, school board and trustee elections.

All residents 18 or over may register at Rolling Meadows City Hall and Palatine Village Hall until Sept. 20. Palatine Township Hall and Elk Grove Township Hall registers voters year round.

lack of an organized village ambulance policy seems to be the major culprit in perpetuating this competition.

Both Palatine Village Mgr. Berton Braun and Police Chief Robert Centner favor using private ambulances. Furthermore, hospital and village officials alike concede private services are more effective and efficient than the Palatine Fire Department ambulance.

Yet private ambulances continue to lose business, apparently to the fire department.

To the individual who calls an ambulance in an emergency this means the best ambulance may not respond to the call.

To the taxpayer it means tax money is spent on supporting an ambulance service which could be better and less expensively run with private resources.

PALATINE VILLAGE policy now is for the Palatine police, who do all dispatching, to call the private ambulance services for most emergency calls, and only to send the fire department ambulance if no private ambulance is available. However, the fire department is called for most inhalator cases, many of which are transported to hospitals.

County and State's police policies add to the confusion. County police, when notified of an accident under their jurisdiction, will call the nearest available ambulance service.

State police said they will specifically ask for the fire department ambulance for an accident under their jurisdiction.

As Braun put it when asked about ambulance service in Palatine, "Anything you hear about it is probably true."

Village Incumbent Party Growing

The Village Incumbent Party, (VIP) an independent party formed for April's election, still is going strong.

Terry Leighty, village trustee and president of the group, said a precinct captains' meeting will be held the end of this month to carry through proposals made during the campaign.

The VIP's were successful in getting two of three incumbent trustees re-elected to the village board. Trustees Fred Zajonc and Clayton Brown won four-year terms while Tom Kearns lost his seat to Merwin Soper, who ran as a Republican.

Leighty, who served as campaign manager for the VIP Party, explained, "During the campaign we made some promises that we still have every intention of fulfilling."

"One of the biggest ones is an improved form of candidate selection for local elections," he added.

The VIP Party was created after the local Republican Party dropped two of the three incumbent trustees from its slate. Only Zajonc was offered the nomination, but he declined in favor of running with Brown and Kearns.

"OUR BIGGEST reason for organizing the party was in objection to the Republican's way of slating candidates, so we feel it's important to come up with an alternative," Leighty said.

This year Republican candidates were chosen by a majority vote of local precinct captains after potential candidates were interviewed by a slate-making committee.

"We believe a different method is necessary in order to encourage more local residents to become interested in the local government," Leighty explained.

He explained a committee of VIP's will study alternate methods of slate-making including a caucus and convention and make recommendations at the July meeting.

Since the April election the party's name has been changed to Village Independent Party.

X-Way Traffic Jams Are 'Worse Than Expected'

State highway officials yesterday renewed their pleas for motorists to find alternate routes to the Kennedy and Dan Ryan expressways, on which four-month construction projects have been started.

Traffic jams on both roads were "worse than expected," yesterday morning, according to a spokesman for the Illinois Division of Highways. The spokesman said apparently few commuters heeded advice to avoid the two routes.

Traffic on the Dan Ryan moved "surprisingly well" late yesterday afternoon, according to the Chicago Communications Center of the highway division. Conditions were expected to be worse today as construction activity expands.

The spokesman said southbound traffic moved fairly well on the Kennedy late yesterday afternoon to North Avenue. "When you reach North Avenue, it's like a brick wall," he said.

Westbound traffic on the Kennedy was reported backed up for over a mile at Des Plaines and River Roads late yesterday afternoon.

Challenger Comes To Local Politics

by MARTHA KOPER

Some words I thought would never be spoken in Palatine. Like "national political parties should stay out of local government."

But recently the sentence seems to be coming more and more popular. Not that national party affiliation is dying, but the fact in local politics seems to be fading.

Just four years ago the local Republican organization geared up for its debut in the village board race. Although there were a few cries of protest, most people seemed thoroughly excited with the idea. With a high percentage of Palatine votboard was on the GOP ballot.

Although all the candidates elected to the board are registered Republicans, two of them won election as members of an independent party, the Village Incumbent Party, (VIP).

AND THAT'S WHEN the talk began. Supporters of the VIP's began to say that maybe a national political party doesn't belong in a village like Palatine. That maybe the Republican name was doing more harm than good. That maybe several qualified people were reluctant to offer themselves for public office because they believed there wasn't a chance of beating the GOP name. That belief was dispelled by the VIP's in April.

One question remains: Is the Republican party dead in Palatine?

Without a doubt, it's not. But even better, neither is the VIP Party.

As reported on the front page of today's paper organizers of the independent party want to keep it going. They want to find a different method of nominating candidates for local offices than the Republicans use.

It's a commendable effort and could mean the return of a two-party system to Palatine. Even though most VIP's are still registered Republicans, they seem to believe that good and qualified candidates don't always come from smoke-filled rooms. They want candidates to be chosen by more than a few top Party men.

Even though the next village election is not until 1973, the time couldn't be better to start thinking about a fairer way to offer the people a wide choice of candidates.

Martha Koper

ers registered as Republicans, chances for a victory for the GOP slate were fantastic.

As almost anyone could have predicted, the Republican candidates glided to their new positions on the village board.

But this year it was different. Something happened to knock the magic out of the name Republican and only one of three candidates elected to the village

Private Ambulance Service May Quit

private ambulance service is by no means unique to Palatine. Rolling Meadows, which is trying to raise $14,300 for an ambulance, also faces a tough decision on whether to use its new ambulance only as a backup for emergencies or as the "first-string" ambulance, probably requiring a separate full-time crew.

Palatine officials need not feel alone, though there are no federal or state regulations for ambulances, either.

The American College of Surgeons (ACS) has, however, compiled a list of "essential equipment for ambulances." According to the U.S. Hwy. Safety Act of 1966, any municipality seeking federal aid in purchasing an ambulance, as Rolling Meadows is doing, must include the equipment on the ACS list in its ambulance.

The Palatine Fire Department currently operates two ambulances, one donated by J. L. Poole Funeral Home, which had gone out of the ambulance business, and the other purchased for $7,200, according to Fire Chief Orville Helms.

The fire department ambulances do not carry all the equipment on the ACS list. Furthermore, the fire department resuscitator is mechanical, and not the hand-operated bag-mask type on the "essential" list.

DELTA AMBULANCE the only private ambulance service in Palatine, now operates one ambulance. Erwin G. Kennitz, owner of Delta, said his ambulance carries all items on the ACS list, plus other items he considers equally essential to ambulance service, much of it added on the recommendations of physicians.

Kennitz said his ambulance cost $27,000, including equipment, almost four times as much as the fire department ambulance.

Perhaps equally as important is the fact that Kennitz had to sell $9,000 worth of cardiac equipment because, he said, he simply could not support it.

This equipment, according to Kennitz, could record all cardiac data and transmit complete cardiograms to any hospital equipped to receive it. Thus the hospital, he said, would have all information on the heart patient's condition when the ambulance arrives.

Kennitz said his company has run at a loss each of its seven years. "I honestly don't know how long I can keep it up," he said.

Kennitz said other private ambulances don't bother him. "Other private ambulance services keep me on my toes," he said. "My competition is from the fire department."

Braun admitted, "It's hard to keep a private service in business if they lose emergencies."

THE NECESSITY for private ambulances is because under no circumstances are fire department ambulances called for non-emergency uses, such as transporting a patient from a hospital to a nursing home.

Jack Ryon, director of information for Northwest Community Hospital, said, "If we didn't have private ambulances we'd be in a real fix."

J. L. Poole's departure from the ambulance business is one indication of the plight of private ambulances. As Dr. J. Ernest Breed of the Illinois State Medical Society wrote in the Herald, funeral directors provide 80 per cent of all ambulance services in Illinois, and most are going out of business due to rising costs and salaries.

Another issue involved in Palatine's ambulance care is whether a part-time service, using different men each time, is capable of providing as good care as a full-time service.

Helms said he will call as many volunteer firemen as he needs for a particular ambulance or inhalator call, generally two or three. But the men who respond will vary as to who's available, Helms said.

As Kennitz said, "If you don't use a resuscitator at least once a week you get rusty at it."

And Ryon said, "Palatine doesn't do as good a job transporting people as do most other full-time crews, whether they're fire department or private services."

Charge 3 With Possession Of Marijuana

Three young men were arrested and charged by Palatine police Sunday for possession of marijuana at a doughnut shop on Northwest Highway in Palatine.

Michael Walter Nechoda, 2200 S. Ashland, Palatine, Robert Charles Piper, 1517 W. Byron, Chicago and John Forrest Bass, 3706 W. Emerson, Palatine were all released on bond pending a July 29 trial at Arlington Heights District Court.

Nechoda, 20, and Piper, 19, posted 10 per cent of the $1,000 bond Sunday. Bass' bond was reduced to $500 Tuesday following his lawyer's testimony that Bass has mental and physical disabilities.

The trio were charged with a misdemeanor for possession of less than 2½ grams of marijuana. Should the police determine more than that amount was involved, the charge could be changed to a felony, a police spokesman said.

ARSON IS SUSPECTED in the Saturday morning blaze which destroyed a frame summer cottage at Rte. 12 and Chestnut Street in unincorporated Palatine Township. Fire Chief Orville Helms said the vacant cottage was completely engulfed in flames by the time the fire department responded. The owner of the cottage, Jurico Stelmazczuk, said he knew of repeated incidents of vandalism at the cottage.

Ask Apartment Complex To Improve Basements

Rolling Meadows Building and Zoning Officer Sverre Haug has asked Meadow Trace officials to improve the basements at the apartment complex or face legal action to close the basements to tenants.

Upon inspection of the apartment buildings last week by Ald. Frederick Jacobson and Haug, priorities were set for improvements at the apartment complex on Arbor Drive in Rolling Meadows. Haug said he has asked that additional exits be constructed in the basements and ventilation improved in the basement areas of the buildings.

"These are my priorities," Haug said yesterday. "Two buildings will be improved each month," he said the project to upgrade the safety in the basements would take about a year to complete.

Haug said the basements do not comply with Rolling Meadows fire, building and health codes. "We certainly don't want someone to get caught down there during a fire and can't get out."

Fire Chief Thomas Fogarty said that the basements needed improvements to bring them to fire code regulations.

The initial inspection of the apartment complex took place last October, after a number of complaints from tenants in the buildings. City officials found a number of building code violations, but Haug said most of the violations have been improved with the exception of additional escape routes in the basements and ventilation improvements.

"A lot has been done there, especially in housekeeping from the first tour we took," Haug said. "But the real safety hazard is in the basements."

Haug added that two buildings must be improved in July, or he will ask that the basements be closed to tenant use. Washers and dryers are located in the basements as well as tenant's storage lockers.

John Blyth, Meadow Trace manager, said yesterday all improvements will be made in the basements.

Under the arrangement, Sears paid the village, which in turn pays the men for the work which is outside of normal police duties.

Heidt Granted Continuance

William F. Heidt, 31, of 962 Valewood Dr., Bartlett, was granted a week's continuance, until Tuesday, when he appeared yesterday in Cook County Circuit Court in Niles.

Heidt, a patrolman with the Schaumburg Police Department, was charged by that department with grand theft a week ago yesterday. He allegedly stole $1,000 to $1,100 worth of merchandise from the Sears Roebuck and Co. store being prepared for opening at Woodfield Mall. The thefts allegedly occurred over a week and a half just prior to Heidt's arrest.

The patrolman had submitted his resignation from the Schaumburg force three weeks prior to his arrest, and it was to have become effective last Wednesday. Police Chief Martin Conroy rejected the resignation when Heidt was arrested, and placed the patrolman on suspension. Heidt is to request a hearing before the village fire and police commission on charges of conduct unbecoming a police officer.

Start Bank Fund For Family After Fire Sweeps Home

A fund has been set up at the Bank of Rolling Meadows to aid members of the James Wilcks family who are homeless today after fire struck their home in Rolling Meadows Monday.

Fire roared through the interior of the home at 3408 Peacock Ln. Monday evening causing an estimated $4,500 structural damage and great damage to personal belongings of seven members of the family.

Fire Chief Thomas Fogarty said firemen received the call at 7:01 p.m. and when they arrived at the scene, flames had engulfed both bedrooms. Fogarty said he believes the fire was caused by an electrical short in a bedroom.

"The Wilcks family was in the living room when they discovered the fire," Fogarty said. Although the fire was contained inside, the home was structurally damaged, Fogarty added. He said the roof dropped and floors and walls were destroyed. There also was smoke damage throughout.

NEARBY HOMES also had smoke damage and were fumigated by firemen Monday. There was no damage to nearby houses, Fogarty said.

American Red Cross officials housed the family at the Holiday Inn in Rolling Meadows Monday night and today the four children are staying at neighbors' homes.

The fund at the Bank of Rolling Meadows was established by Mrs. Kathleen Brightwell, a neighbor, and Supt. of Public Works James McFeggan. Persons interested in giving funds to the family should write the James Wilcks Family Fund at the bank, according to Mrs. Brightwell.

Others who may have articles of clothing or furniture may contact Mrs. Brightwell at 258-1833. The children are boys ages 14 and 10 and girls 11 and

New Eligible Voters Are Not Rushing To Register

When 18, 19 and 20-year-olds were given the right to vote in all elections last Wednesday, there was no influx of new registered voters, according to reports from Palatine and Rolling Meadows officials.

On Wednesday, the Ohio legislature ratified the 26th amendment to the U. S. Constitution making persons 18-years-old and over eligible to vote in local elections. The young voters were allowed to cast ballots in national elections in January.

With passage of the new legislation, 721 more residents will be allowed to vote in Rolling Meadows and 1,056 additional in Palatine, according to U. S. Census figures.

Mrs. Margaret Chapman, Palatine township clerk, reported "very few new voters signed up last week." She estimated four or five new voters between 18 and 20 were registered.

Since January, Mrs. Chapman estimated about 90 additional persons were registered in Palatine Township. "I got the real crowd from Palatine High School," she commented. "An entire class came over one day to register."

NOT A SINGLE new voter was registered at Rolling Meadows city hall and one at Palatine village hall late last week.

Rolling Meadows newly sanctioned voters who are residents of Elk Grove Township (those living south of Central Road) didn't rush to become registered either last week.

Elk Grove Township officials reported no 18, 19 or 20 year-olds became new voters after Wednesday's ruling.

The 26th amendment allows not only the lowering of voting age requirements in city, village and national elections, but also allows the lowering of age requirements in park board, school board and trustee elections.

All residents 18 or over may register at Rolling Meadows City Hall and Palatine Village Hall until Sept. 20. Palatine Township Hall and Elk Grove Township Hall registers voters year round.

ACCORDING TO officials, voters must register 28 days before an election, except for elections held by school district, when they may register on election day.

Palatine Township Hall is open from 9 a.m. until 4 p.m., Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday and from 9 a.m. until noon on Saturday. Elk Grove Township Hall has the same hours except it opens from 9 a.m. until noon on Wednesday.

Palatine Village Hall and Rolling Meadows City Hall will accept voter registration Monday thru Friday, Palatine from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. and Rolling Meadows from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Siren System Will Be Installed

The new Rolling Meadows outdoor siren system will be installed next week in three sections of the city, according to an announcement by Deputy Civil Defense Director Carmen Vinezano.

"We have a few minor changes to be made," Vinezano said Friday. Preliminary plans show three sirens to be installed, one near Hicks Road north of Euclid Avenue, a second in the southern section of the city near Algonquin Road and Rte. 53 and a threestone siren at the fire station on Meadow Drive.

Rolling Meadows City Council approved purchase of the emergency sirens earlier this year for $15,460. The project was financed through a $15,000 grant from the state and matching funds from city government.

Besides the sirens, the total civil defense warning system involves a teletype and a monitor radio operation. Individual monitors will be installed in each of the 17 Dist. 15 schools in Palatine and Rolling Meadows providing schools with immediate information on emergency weather conditions.

The monitors will also be installed at the fire station, city garage and Rolling Meadows Park District.

Vinezano said the new sirens may be tested July 20.

Turtle Races Slated At Shopping Center

Turtle races will be held Saturday at the Rolling Meadows Shopping Center on Kirchoff Road.

Youths are invited to bring their own turtles to compete for gift certificates with the winning turtle to receive the grand prize. The turtles will be placed within a circle with the turtle reaching the outer boundary first the winner. Registration begins at 10:30 a.m. and races start at 11 a.m.

X-Way Traffic Jams Are 'Worse Than Expected'

State highway officials yesterday renewed their pleas for motorists to find alternate routes to the Kennedy and Dan Ryan expressways, on which four-month construction projects have been started.

Traffic jams on both roads were "worse than expected," yesterday morning, according to a spokesman for the Illinois Division of Highways. The spokesman said apparently few commuters heeded advice to avoid the two routes.

Traffic on the Dan Ryan moved "surprisingly well" late yesterday afternoon, according to the Chicago Communications Center of the highway division. Conditions were expected to be worse today as construction activity expands.

The spokesman said southbound traffic moved fairly well on the Kennedy late yesterday afternoon to North Avenue. "When you reach North Avenue, it's like a brick wall," he said.

Westbound traffic on the Kennedy was reported backed up for over a mile at Des Plaines and River Roads late yesterday afternoon.

Girls' Day Camp Season Is Open

Local Blue Birds and Camp Fire Girls of the Kayati District have begun their day camp season.

About 50 counselors, six junior counselors, and more than 160 girls are participating in the "pleasin season."

Activities include cooking over open fires, songs and dances, hiking and crafts. The girls will have their choice of making purses, weaving, plaques, puppets, whimsy stones, mini purses or papier mache art.

The first week of camp was held last week at Deer Grove for Blue Birds and Camp Fire. This week Alphonse Camp is for Camp Fire girls only. They will learn to do macrame art, go horse back riding and have campouts.

Papoose Camp for pre-schoolers and Braves Camp for boys seven to 10-years-old are held for the children of counselors working at Day Camp. Special activities are geared to their age level and planned by trained volunteers. The camps are run during the same hours as the Camp Fire Camp.

The Kayati district serves girls from Palatine, Rolling Meadows, Barrington and Lake Zurich.

Day Camp director is Mrs. Robert Gibbs, Palatine, and co-director is Mrs. Pat Hallerud, Rolling Meadows.

President Nixon has urged labor and management in the steel industry to write a new wage contract that would not price American steel out of the increasingly competitive world market. Management and Budget Director George Schultz said the President appealed "not only to their economic patriotism but beyond that to their sensitivity to their own self-interests." The present contract expires Aug. 1 and covers 450,000 workers.

The plane was hijacked Friday and it lasted 44 hours and took them 7,500 miles.

City Beat

City Abounds With People Who Care

by DOUG RAY

If there's a category in the All-American City competition for "helping out" Rolling Meadows should win it hands down.

The city, now headlong in the race to be named one of the outstanding municipalities in the United States, has one thing definitely going for itself — residents who care about their neighbors.

The most recent example of Rolling Meadows people coming to the aid of those in need began yesterday, when

Doug Ray

Mrs. Kathleen Brightwell organized a fund to help her neighbors, Mr. and Mrs. James Wilks.

Fire gutted the interior of the Wilks' home, destroying clothing, furniture and a part of their house which had been enlarged like so many others in Rolling Meadows to accommodate a growing family.

"It's just bad luck. It could have happened to any of us," Mrs. Brightwell said. "The fund hopefully will help them get back on their feet."

Similarly, two months ago the Rolling Meadows Jaycees established a fund for 13-month-old Terry Hayford, who is critically ill with a rare disease. The Jaycees sold Mother's Day corsages to provide the first money and solicited help from city businessmen to aid the family with mounting hospital bills.

But the largest single effort by Rolling Meadows residents to help disaster victims came early this year. It was called the Rolling Meadows Fire Aid Fund and nearly $2,000 was collected and distributed to persons left homeless by the Meadow Trace fire in January.

Involvement in the fund included not only friends and neighbors, but businesses, churches, and schools and even grocery stores. Truck loads of clothing and articles of furniture helped 28 homeless families get back on their feet again.

All the donations received through the funds established this year, gave the unfortunate some relief from their plight. But most of all it gave them the reassurance that somebody besides immediate family and friends cares.

It's doubtful that Rolling Meadows will get any points for aid given by its residents to others in need. The judges in the All-American City contest would be hard pressed to measure it.

But whoever is compiling the gigantic booklet of accomplishments and feats in Rolling Meadows to submit in the contest might add a separate page and title it "compassion."

The judges then could have an idea of what is going on in Rolling Meadows. And it could make all the difference.

Tammy Meade

Mrs. Bruce Woody of 3402 Meadow Drive, was recently elected president of the Double Dydee Mothers of Twins Club.

Jeanne, a resident of Rolling Meadows for 5 years, is the mother of 4½-year-old twins, Christopher and Michael. Joining the Mothers of Twins Club about four years ago. She stresses the fact that mothers of twins from Rolling Meadows are welcome to join the club which meets once a month at Lauderburg and Oehler, 2000 E. Northwest Highway in Arlington Heights, during the months of September through June. The club includes mothers of twins from Hanover Park, Buffalo Grove, Rolling Meadows, Palatine, Schaumburg, Elk Grove, Mount Prospect, and Arlington Heights.

Other than meeting to discuss problems that arise with raising twins, the club also sponsors fund-raising events each year and donate the proceeds to the Clearbrook School here in Rolling Meadows.

For more information on the club, please call Mrs. Patrick Tuttle at 437-8345.

FOR ALL YOU gals who have been wanting to learn the game of golf, now is your chance to enroll in a course taught by Arlington Park Pro, Dave Walgren, at Arlington Park.

WELCOME TO the new deacon at St. Colette's Church, Rev. Gary Miller.

Raised in St. Thecla's parish on the northwest side, and graduating from the parish school in 1960, he prepared for the priesthood at Quigley North, Niles, and Mundelein.

The Rev. Miller has worked with the children at Maryville for the past four summers. During this past school year, he taught religion to freshman and sophomore girls at Carmel High School in Mundelein.

With his keen interest in children, he should certainly be an asset to the parish as well as to the community. Welcome to Rolling Meadows, Gary!

A TOTAL OF 97 couples enjoyed an evening of dinner and bowling at the Scotch Doubles evening sponsored by the Rolling Meadows Boys Baseball Association (ROOMBA) last Friday evening at the Rolling Meadows Bowl.

While the couples were bowling, there was spot calling throughout the evening for strikes, spares, gutterballs, etc.

Trophies were awarded to high scorers. The special award of the evening was the booby prize, a split bowling pin.

Special gag prizes were given through the evening for gutter balls. The gag prizes were fountain pens and apparently 65 people rolled gutter balls through the evening.

According to Mrs. Pat Vetterli, chairman of the Scotch Doubles, everyone enjoyed this evening of fun.

Heidt Granted Continuance

William F. Heidt, 31, of 962 Valewood Dr., Bartlett, was granted a week's continuance, until Tuesday, when he appeared yesterday in Cook County Circuit Court in Niles.

Heidt, a patrolman with the Schaumburg Police Department, was charged by that department with grand theft a week ago yesterday. He allegedly stole $1,000 to $1,100 worth of merchandise from the Sears Roebuck and Co. store being prepared for opening at Woodfield Mall. The thefts allegedly occurred over a week and a half prior to Heidt's arrest.

The patrolman had submitted his resignation from the Schaumburg force three weeks prior to his arrest, and it was to have become effective last Wednesday. Police Chief Martin Conroy rejected the resignation when Heidt was arrested, and placed the patrolman on suspension. Heidt is to request a hearing before the village fire and police commission on charges of conduct unbecoming a police officer.

WHEN HEIDT appeared yesterday before Judge Marvin J. Peters, he was represented by Atty. Richard Adler, who requested the continuance. Prosecuting in the case is Dan Miroballi, assistant state attorney for the district.

Along with other members of the Schaumburg department, Heidt was hired by Sears through the village to guard the store during construction and while it was being stocked with merchandise. Under the arrangement, Sears pays the village, which in turn pays the men for the work which is outside of normal police duties.

The charge against Heidt alleges he took such items as household mixers, golf clubs and fishing equipment from the store while he was on the special guard duty. The items allegedly were found in a U-Haul trailer Heidt was packing for his move to Las Vegas, Nev.

Heidt had been with the Schaumburg force five years, and Chief Conroy described his record with the force until his arrest as "good" or "average."

Private Ambulance Service May Quit

private ambulance service is by no means unique to Palatine. Rolling Meadows, which is trying to raise $14,300 for an ambulance, also faces a tough decision on whether to use its new ambulance only as a backup for emergencies or as the "first-string" ambulance, probably requiring a separate full-time crew.

Palatine officials need not feel alone, though there are no federal or state regulations for ambulances, either.

The American College of Surgeons (ACS) has, however, compiled a list of "essential equipment for ambulances." According to the U.S. Hwy. Safety Act of 1966, any municipality seeking federal aid in purchasing an ambulance, as Rolling Meadows is doing, must include the equipment on the ACS list in its ambulance.

The Palatine Fire Department currently operates two ambulances, one donated by J. L. Poole Funeral Home, which had gone out of the ambulance business, and the other purchased for $7,200, according to Fire Chief Orville Helms.

The fire department ambulances do not carry all the equipment on the ACS list. Furthermore, the fire department resuscitator is mechanical, and not the hand-operated bag-mask type on the "essential" list.

DELTA AMBULANCE the only private ambulance service in Palatine, now operates one ambulance. Erwin G. Kennitz, owner of Delta, said his ambulance carries all items on the ACS list, plus other items he considers equally essential to ambulance service, much of it added on the recommendations of physicians.

Kennitz said his ambulance cost $27,000, including equipment, almost four times as much as the fire department ambulance.

Perhaps equally as important is the fact that Kennitz had to sell $9,000 worth of cardiac equipment because, he said, he simply could not support it.

This equipment, according to Kennitz, could record all cardiac data and transmit complete cardiograms to any hospital equipped to receive it. Thus the hospital, he said, would have all information on the heart patient's condition when the ambulance arrives.

Kennitz said his company has run at a loss each of its seven years. "I honestly don't know how long I can keep it up," he said.

Kennitz said other private ambulances don't bother him. "Other private ambulance services keep me on my toes," he said. "My competition is from the fire department."

Braun admitted, "It's hard to keep a private service in business if they lose emergencies."

THE NECESSITY for private ambulances is because under no circumstances are fire department ambulances called for non-emergency uses, such as transporting a patient from a hospital to a nursing home.

Jack Ryon, director of information for Northwest Community Hospital, said, "If we didn't have private ambulances we'd be in a real fix."

J. L. Poole's departure from the ambulance business is one indication of the plight of private ambulances. As Dr. J. Ernest Breed of the Illinois State Medical Society wrote in the Herald, funeral directors provide 80 per cent of all ambulance services in Illinois, and most are going out of business due to rising costs and salaries.

Another issue involved in Palatine's ambulance care is whether a part-time service, using different men each time, is capable of providing as good care as a full-time service.

Helms said he will call as many volunteer firemen as he needs for a particular ambulance or inhalator call, generally two or three. But the men who respond will vary as to who's available, Helms said.

As Kennitz said, "If you don't use a resuscitator at least once a week you get rusty at it."

Charge 3 With Possession Of Marijuana

Three young men were arrested and charged by Palatine police Sunday for possession of marijuana at a doughnut shop on Northwest Highway in Palatine.

Michael Walter Nechoda, 2200 S. Ashland, Palatine, Robert Charles Piper, 1517 W. Byron, Chicago and John Forrest Bass, 3706 W. Emerson, Palatine were all released on bond pending a July 29 trial at Arlington Heights District Court.

Nechoda, 20, and Piper, 19, posted 10 per cent of the $1,000 bond Sunday. Bass' bond was reduced to $500 Tuesday following his lawyer's testimony that Bass has mental and physical disabilities.

The trio were charged with a misdemeanor for possession of less than 2½ grams of marijuana. Should the police determine more than that amount was involved, the charge could be changed to a felony, a police spokesman said.

ARSON IS SUSPECTED in the Saturday morning blaze which destroyed a frame summer cottage at Rte. 12 and Chestnut Street in unincorporated Palatine Township. Fire Chief Orville Helms said the vacant cottage was completely engulfed in flames by the time the fire department responded. The owner of the cottage, Jurko Stelmasczuk, said he knew of repeated incidents of vandalism at the cottage.

Ask Apartment Complex To Improve Basements

Rolling Meadows Building and Zoning Officer Sverre Haug has asked Meadow Trace officials to improve the basements at the apartment complex or face legal action to close the basements to tenants.

Upon inspection of the apartment buildings last week by Ald. Frederick Jacobson and Haug, priorities were set for improvements at the apartment complex on Arbor Drive in Rolling Meadows. Haug said he has asked that additional exits be constructed in the basements and ventilation improved in the basement areas of the buildings.

"These are my priorities," Haug said yesterday. "Two buildings will be improved each month," he said the project to upgrade the safety in the basements would take about a year to complete.

Haug said the basements do not comply with Rolling Meadows fire, building and health codes. "We certainly don't want someone to get caught down there during a fire and can't get out."

Fire Chief Thomas Fogarty said that the basements needed improvements to bring them to fire code regulations.

The initial inspection of the apartment complex took place last October, after a number of complaints from tenants in the buildings. City officials found a number of building code violations, but Haug said most of the violations have been improved with the exception of additional escape routes in the basements and ventilation improvements.

"A lot has been done there, especially in housekeeping from the first four we took," Haug said. "But the real safety hazard is in the basements."

Haug added that two buildings must be improved in July, or he will ask that the basements be closed to tenant use. Washers and dryers are located in the basements as well as tenant's storage lockers.

John Blyth, Meadow Trace manager, said yesterday all improvements will be made in the basements.

Complex At River, Euclid Slated For 10-Acre Site

Rezoning of 10 acres at River Road and Euclid Avenue in Prospect Heights for apartments was approved yesterday by the Cook County Board.

The county board followed a recommendation made by the Cook County Zoning Board of Appeals in its decision. Commissioner Floyd Fulle, of Des Plaines, was one of two commissioners who voted against the rezoning.

This is the second time in two years George Martin Sloan, owner of the property, has asked the county to rezone his land from single-family residential to multiple family. The first time the county denied his request.

Last year, almost 100 residents objected to Sloan's proposal. But this time the only objectors were the villages of Wheeling and Mount Prospect.

EARLIER SEVERAL community leaders indicated they would ask the county board to postpone its decision until the Mount Prospect Village Board makes a ruling on an annexation petition. Residents in the "new town" area of Prospect Heights (including Sloan's land) have petitioned for annexation to Mount Prospect. However the annexation petitioners have taken no steps to block the rezoning.

If the village approves the annexation petition before Sloan secures a building permit from the county, then the village could reverse the county's decision, according to those connected with the annexation effort.

Currently a feasibility study on the annexation is underway. Mount Prospect Mayor Robert Teichert has indicated the village board would begin deliberations on the annexation proposal by the end of July.

According to one source, the only legal recourse residents have at this time is to file suit. But there are no indications currently that the residents plan to dispute the rezoning.

Sloan has proposed building eight three-story apartment buildings with a total of 192 living units on the site. Approximately one-third of the units, 64 apartments, will be one-bedroom. The remainder will be two-bedroom types. Estimated rental fee is $175 per month for one-bedroom apartments and between $265 and $285 for two-bedroom units. About one and a half parking spaces per unit are included in Sloan's plans.

Annexation By Wheeling Invalid?

If Wheeling annexes land within the proposed City of Prospect Heights, that annexation may later be declared invalid, according to Prospect Heights officials advocating incorporation for their community.

Wheeling has taken preliminary steps to annex three gas stations, a small shopping center and the Lutheran Church of the Good Shepherd at Hintz and Elmhurst roads. Members of the Wheeling Village Board voted last week to survey the area in preparation for annexation.

The parcels are included in an incorporation proposal that was dismissed from the Cook County Circuit Court last week. The incorporation petitioners say they will take their case to the appellate court, however.

"If the appellate court rules in our favor, and the incorporation is approved in a referendum, then all annexations since the date of the original petition would be invalid," said Jack Gilligan, a leader of the incorporation movement.

HOWEVER, ATTORNEYS representing the two municipalities that objected to the incorporation petition in court, said the municipalities are not restricted in annexing land within the proposed city's boundaries. Moreover, they say, these annexations would not necessarily be declared invalid if the appellate court upheld the incorporation petition.

The attorneys are Paul Hamer representing Wheeling, and Jack Siegel, village attorney for Arlington Heights.

Hamer disagrees with Gilligan's contention, pointing out, "There is no case law showing that the annexations would be invalid. Wheeling is free to annex land until a time when the lower court decision is reversed and a mandate is issued."

"If a property owner in the area of the proposed city sought annexation to Arlington Heights, the village would not hold up the annexation because of an appeal of the incorporation petition," said Siegel. "The incorporation petition does not freeze everything. I don't know if the annexations could later be declared invalid if the appellate court reversed the county court's ruling."

ACCORDING TO DONALD Kreger, representing the incorporation petitioners, "If the case isn't reversed by the appellate court, then the annexations could be successful. But if the case is reversed and the incorporation is successful then the annexations wouldn't be valid."

The Wheeling Village Board, at the request of Trustee John Koeppen, began taking steps toward annexing the unincorporated land while the incorporation petition was still before the county court. Koeppen said he had proposed the annexation "a long time ago, and had no thought about the incorporation one way or the other. I honestly thought the land wasn't included in the proposed city."

The incorporation petition is not now before any court. However, the petitioners may file a notice of appeal within 30 days after the circuit court ruling. That action would place the matter before the appellate court.

Concerning any annexation attempts while the case is before the courts, Kreger said, "Case laws show incorporation would take precedence over annexation while it is pending in court. No property can be disconnected from the proposed city while the incorporation petition is before the court. If certain conditions are met, property may be disconnected after the incorporation."

HAMER SAID, "property owners may petition the court to disconnect from the proposed city if they're on the outskirts during the pending of the incorporation suit. I don't think any court would stop them."

Wheeling and Arlington Heights objected to the incorporation on the grounds that the petitioners failed to obtain the villages' consent, which they said is required in state statutes. Settling a discrepancy in state statutes, the judge upheld the municipalities' objection. The judge also refused to grant the petitioners an appeal bond, which would, in effect, freeze all annexations of the land in the proposed city.

Half Of Phase One Sewers Are Set

More than half of the new sewers in Phase One of the Prospect Heights Old Town Sanitary District (OTSD) system are now ready for operation.

The entire OTSD system will cost approximately $1.1 million and serve approximately 1,300 homes in Prospect Heights. Construction of the new system is divided into two phases. Phase One encompasses approximately 750 homes south of Willow Road. Phase two includes 450 homes north of Willow Road.

All of the homes in Phase One were expected to be serviced by July 1. However, a delay in construction of a Metropolitan Sanitary District (MSD) interceptor sewer put the OTSD lines behind schedule, according to Richard Schuld, superintendent of the Prospect Heights district.

MSD CONTRACTED with OTSD to begin the interceptor along Wheeling and Camp McDonald roads in December 1969. It was to have been completed in November 1970. The interceptor was not completed until 2½ week ago, however. The interceptor connects OTSD lines to MSD sewage treatment plants.

According to Schuld, 450 of the 750 homes in Phase One are ready to be put in service. The remaining 300 homes are connected to a trunk line along Hillside Avenue which was delayed by the late construction of the interceptor.

Of the 450 homes, Schuld said about 250 are ready to be hooked up. District residents must have sewer lines constructed from their home to the OTSD lines before they can use the new system. In order to hook up their home lines to the OTSD lines, residents must pay a tap-on fee of $250. If this fee is not paid within 90 days of the system's availability, the cost will rise to $450. In addition $50 will be added to the fee each year it is not paid.

More than 95 per cent of the residents in Phase One have already paid their tap-on fees, said Schuld. "We are pleased with the residents' response." The fees may be paid at the OTSD office at 7 E. Palatine Rd. in Prospect Heights.

A breakdown of the sections in Phase One shows that in Section One, including the area west of McDonald Creek, east of Wheeling Road and north of Euclid Avenue, all of the homes are ready for service. In Section Two, west of Wheeling Road (including homes on Wheeling Road) east of Elmhurst Road, north of Camp McDonald Road and south of Willow Road, two thirds of the homes are ready for service.

All of the homes are ready for service in Section Three, which is west of Wheeling Road, east of Elmhurst Road, south of Camp McDonald Road (including homes on McDonald Road) and north of Euclid Avenue. No homes are ready for service in Section Four, which is west of Elmhurst Road, east of Dale Avenue, north of Camp McDonald Road and south of Willow Road.

The lines not yet in service are being tested by OTSD and MSD officials.

X-Way Traffic Jams Are 'Worse Than Expected'

State highway officials yesterday renewed their pleas for motorists to find alternate routes to the Kennedy and Dan Ryan expressways, on which four-month construction projects have been started.

Traffic jams on both roads were "worse than expected," yesterday morning, according to a spokesman for the Illinois Division of Highways. The spokesman said apparently few commuters heeded advice to avoid the two routes.

Traffic on the Dan Ryan moved "surprisingly well" late yesterday afternoon, according to the Chicago Communications Center of the highway division. Conditions were expected to be worse today as construction activity expands.

The spokesman said southbound traffic moved fairly well on the Kennedy late yesterday afternoon to North Avenue. "When you reach North Avenue, it's like a brick wall," he said.

Westbound traffic on the Kennedy was reported backed up for over a mile at Des Plaines and River Roads late yesterday afternoon.

This Morning In Brief

The Nation

President Nixon has urged labor and management in the steel industry to write a new wage contract that would not price American steel out of the increasingly competitive world market. Management and Budget Director George Schultz said the President appealed "not only to their economic patriotism but beyond that to their sensitivity to their own self-interests." The present contract expires Aug. 1 and covers 650,000 workers.

Apollo 15 astronauts David R. Scott, Alfred M. Worden and James B. Irwin have started 20 days of launch site isolation in preparation for their flight to the moon July 26. They will, however, be the first moon landing crew that will not have to spend time in quarantine upon returning from the moon.

Louie (Satchmo) Armstrong died at his New York City home just two days after his 71st birthday. The death was unexpected although he had been near death in a hospital a few months ago. The former orphaned waif of the streets of New Orleans went on to become king of the jazz trumpet and won international acclaim.

Teamster sources in Miami Beach say the giant union plans to give imprisoned former president James Hoffa a $75,000 yearly pension and confer upon him the lifetime title of President Emeritus. There were reports, however, that Hoffa has asked for a lump settlement of $1 million. Hoffa resigned all union posts last month to improve his chances for parole from federal prison at Lewisburg, Pa., where he is serving 13 years for mail fraud and jury tampering.

The World

Henry Kissinger, President Nixon's assistant for national security affairs, arrived in India amid elaborate security precautions and demonstrations against American weapon shipments to Pakistan. Kissinger was to spend two days in talks with Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, her top ministers and other Indian leaders. Some of these have made blunt statements about the government's displeasure with the arms shipments to Pakistan.

An Argentine judge has turned an American Navy veteran and his Guatemalan girlfriend over to a five-judge panel to be tried for hijacking a Braniff jetliner from San Antonio, Tex., to Buenos Aires. No date was set for trial, but if convicted, air piracy carries a sentence of from 3 to 15 years. Still in question was whether the pair might be extradited to the United States or Mexico. The plane was hijacked Friday and it lasted 44 hours and took them 7,500 miles.

The State

One of five persons killed in the crash of a small plane near Philo in Champaign County has been identified as Vernon Saylor, leading jockey at River Downs race track in Cincinnati, Ohio. The plane crashed Monday and a widespread search began for the missing aircraft.

The War

Vietnam's first typhoon of the year slammed into North Vietnam at more than 100 m.p.h. after high winds and rain stopped nearly all fighting in South Vietnam's northern region. U.S. Seventh Fleet ships sought shelter, and planes were grounded as Typhoon Harriet swept up the Vietnam coast packing 138 m.p.h. winds.

Astronomer Builds Own Telescope

by KAREN RUGEN

Soon Bill Olmon won't have to strain his eyes trying to find his favorite planet. Olmon, of Mount Prospect, is an amateur astronomer. To make it easier to spot what he's looking for, Olmon is building a telescope in his garage at 1443 Fern Dr.

"I decided to build it because I like to tinker," said the stargazer. "And with six kids, I haven't got enough money to buy one."

Olmon started work on his telescope about a year ago and "works on it now and then." He built the base from bits and pieces of scrap metal. He ordered the $15 metal tube for the scope. And now he's working on the critical parts — the mirror that will reflect the light from the stars and the eyepiece that will enable Olmon to see that reflection.

"I STARTED the mirror when it was just flat glass," said Olmon who pointed to a smoothly curved shining piece of glass. "I've been polishing it now for about 36 hours and have another 10 hours to go. The mirror must have a precise curvature; it must be so accurate that the amount of error can be practically nothing."

Polishing takes hours of rubbing a Pyrex disc against a flint "tool." Olmon uses fine grades of polishing powders for grinding the mirror into shape. When the disc is finished and gets a coat of aluminum, it will be mounted at one end of the telescope tube. The 6" finished product will then have 250-power magnification, strong enough to see mile-long craters on the moon or to read a newspaper a mile away.

An engineer at Honeywell, Inc. in Morton Grove, Olmon describes himself as "a rank beginner" in the area of building telescopes. Since he became interested in having his own telescope, he's been reading magazines on astronomy and is following books describing how to build one. When his portable telescope is finished, he figures he'll be able to see stars and planets "a billion miles away."

OLMON'S GARAGE wall is lined with star charts that show the positions of the planets at any given time. He goes out in the evenings and with his naked eye or a borrowed telescope, tries to see what he can find.

"I like Jupiter because I like to watch its moons revolve at all speeds," Olmon explained. "It's fun to watch them and to time them."

He likes best to look at deep-sky galaxies outside of the Milky Way because "of the fantastic distances — about 34,000 light years away."

Olmon is not convinced that there is no life on the other planets. "We'll probably never know but there's no reason to doubt that there may be a planet around another star like our sun that has an atmosphere similar to ours," he said.

The more he looks up to the sky; the more Olmon is awed by what he sees. He never expects to discover anything. He just figures he will enjoy his hobby — if his telescope works and if, as he says, he can see between the airplanes that fly over his house about "90 per cent of the time" on their way to O'Hare International Airport.

POLISHING THE MIRROR that will fit in the end of his telescope takes a lot of Bill Olmon's time and patience.

When he's finished building his 250-power star gazer, he'll be able to see mile-long craters on the moon.

Woman Continues Battle To Change Club's Policy

A Des Plaines resident is continuing her fight to open the Mount Prospect Country Club golf course to women on Saturday and Sunday mornings.

A legal brief outlining the alleged illegality of discrimination against women is being sent to the Mount Prospect Park District, owner of the course, and should be received this week.

The brief is being prepared by Judith Atkinson, attorney for Patti Lister, 1099 Jeanette Dr. Mrs. Lister has threatened to sue the district because she claims her civil rights have been violated by restrictions on use of the course.

"Their reply to the brief should be in the form of a resolution passed by the park board that says no more discrimination should be allowed," said Miss Atkinson. "If not, we'll have to go to the courts."

Miss Atkinson said the brief will include court decisions on discrimination and parts of the Illinois Constitution that prohibit discrimination based on sex.

"I DOUBT IF the park board will change its decision," said Tom Cooper, park district director. "We'll have to wait and see what the brief says and then the board will have to make a decision. We just can't ignore it." Cooper said the brief, if received in time, would go before the park board at its next regular meeting on Monday. The board meets at Lions Park Recreation Center, 411 S. Maple St., at 8 p.m.

Park officials have said they do not feel they are discriminating against anyone by setting up play times at the golf course. "We are just trying to run an orderly golf course," said Robert Jackson, park board president. "We have set up rules for the course and those rules include certain hours for certain play."

The course is restricted to men on Saturdays from 6 a.m. to 1 p.m. and on Sundays from 6 a.m. to 1 p.m. and on Wednesdays and Thursdays mornings. Men are not allowed to play between 7:30 and 9:30 a.m. on those days.

3 Men Questioned About Second Race Track Fire

Arlington Heights police questioned three persons Monday in connection with an attempted arson at Arlington Park Race Track Sunday night.

Police Detective Gene Deck said two 18-year-old men and a 16-year-old boy were questioned about the arson, but released.

The men were identified by Henry Butler, a night watchman at the track, as the three stable area employees who threatened to burn Barn 7-A down only hours before he discovered a fire in the feed shed of that barn.

Butler discovered the fire about 11 p.m., but was able to extinguish it with the help of two stable hands before Arlington Heights firemen arrived on the scene.

Police estimated that if the fire had been allowed to burn another two minutes the entire barn would have been destroyed.

Teenage Singing Group To Perform

A teenage singing group from Southern California, "The Young Believers," will perform at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at St. Paul Lutheran Church, Busse Avenue and School Street in Mount Prospect.

The public is invited to the concert. An offering will be collected during the concert.

The group is on a tour of the Midwest that will include performances at the upcoming International Convention of the Lutheran Church — Missouri Synod in Milwaukee.

Charge 2 With Theft

Two Mount Prospect men were arrested and charged early Friday for allegedly stealing four removable letters from a Randhurst outdoor sign.

William A. Stansbury, 19, of 408 N. Elmhurst Rd., and Timothy J. McNamara, 19, of 214 S. Wa-Pella Ave., were both charged with theft.

McNamara also was charged with resisting arrest. Stansbury was booked on two traffic violations, driving while under the influence of alcohol and driving with no license plate light.

Bank Will Celebrate 60th Anniversary

The Mount Prospect State Bank will celebrate its 60th anniversary July 9-17. An appearance by Joan Fontaine will highlight the bank's nine-day celebration.

Miss Fontaine, currently appearing in the play "Relatively Speaking" at the Arlington Park Theater, will be at the bank at noon July 17. At that time, she will be interviewed by "Miss Ione," hostess for Channel 7's early morning Prize Movie.

That same day, WEXI-FM in Arlington Heights will record interviews with bank visitors for later broadcast.

Many other events are planned, including a Mount Prospect Historical Society display which will contain old photographs of the Mount Prospect area. METALLIC SOCIAL security plates will be available at a reduced rate in the bank's lobby throughout the celebration period. Free coffee and cakes will be available on the two Saturdays, July 10 and 17.

Also, this year the Mount Prospect Arts and Crafts Fair, sponsored by the Mount Prospect Art League, will be part of the anniversary celebration.

The fair will be open to the public from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sunday, July 11, in the bank's parking lot at Busse Avenue and Emerson Street. In case of rain the fair will be held July 18.

There will be works in oils, acrylics, and watercolors, as well as sculpture and crafts by members of the Mount Prospect Art League, artists from the Chicago area and those from nearby states.

A total of 12 awards will be presented.

The Mount Prospect State Bank is the oldest in the area. When it was chartered in 1911, there were approximately 225 people in Mount Prospect. The village itself was incorporated in 1917.

ORIGINALLY, IT was a national bank, founded by William Busse Sr., staffed by two employees and housed in a small 600-square-foot building which stood at the northeast corner of Main and Busse Streets.

By the end of that first year, deposits amounted to $61,636 and, the bank's total assets amounted to $99,110.

The institution became a state bank in 1926 and two years later, in 1928, the bank moved across the street into bigger quarters, at the northwest corner of the same intersection.

With capital and surplus over the $1 million mark, the bank's board of directors announced in 1958 that a new, third home would be built. Six months later, in mid-October, the bank opened its new $350,000 facility on the home site of William Busse Sr., at the corner of Busse Avenue and Emerson Street.

Deposits in 1970 totaled $73,973,400 and, as of June 30, 1971, assets totaled $89,983,404.

Safe Boating

Week Proclaimed

Mount Prospect Mayor Robert Teichert, in cooperation with a presidential proclamation, has designated the week of July 4-10 as Safe Boating Week.

"I urge all who use our waterways to acquire those skills essential to their own safety and that of others and to apply them to others," Teichert said in his proclamation.

Edward Verkert, of 102 W. Willow Rd., Prospect Heights, a member of the U. S. Coast Guard Auxiliary Flotilla 3-2, has been named chairman of the observance for Mount Prospect.

Verkert has arranged for local boaters to have their craft safety-checked Sunday by a team of examiners from the Coast Guard Auxiliary at Watts' Marina, Pistakee Lake, at the Coast Guard Boating Safety Detachment Headquarters, Rte. 12, Fox Lake, or at Bauske's Boat Basin, Fox Lake. Inspections will begin at 10 a.m. that day.

Teachers Plan To Unveil New Salary Proposal

Teacher negotiators will bring a new salary proposal to the bargaining table tomorrow night as teacher and board negotiating teams again try to reach a 1971-72 contract agreement.

David Metzler, chairman of the teacher negotiations team, would not say if the new salary proposal is higher or lower than previous requests. The latest teacher salary proposal asks for a 9 per cent salary increase above the current salary schedule. Previous proposals have asked for ten and one-half per cent and 6 per cent pay hikes.

Representatives of the Mount Prospect Education Association (MPEA) and the board will present their proposals in writing at the meeting behind closed doors at 7:30 p.m. tomorrow at Lincoln Junior High School. Previously many of the proposals had been made verbally. This is the eleventh time the two parties and the board's professional negotiator Richard Zwieback will meet to try and reach a contract settlement.

BESIDES CHANGES in salary, Metzler said the teacher's new proposal will also include changes in extra duty pay and travel compensation requests. He would not say what the changes will be.

"There will be no surprises in our package," said Leo Floros, chairman of the board's negotiation team. "We will just reduce to writing what we have previously proposed." The board's contract offer includes the current salary schedule which would include a three and one-half per cent pay hike for all returning teachers.

Floros said that a two-year contract, previously requested by the board, would not be included in the written proposal because "I'm sure the teachers wouldn't go for it." The two-year contract would provide that salary would be the only negotiable item for the 1971-72 school year. Floros said that the board will not change its request for an "uninterrupted service provision," in effect a no-strike clause.

Metzler said the teacher's personal leave request would not be affected by the new salary proposal. The teachers have asked continuance of last year's personal leave policy that gives teachers two days personal leave without having to give reason and four days after five years of consecutive teaching in the district. The board's proposal includes the reinstatement of personal leave policy with two days of leave for all staff members subject to the approval of the superintendent.

METZLER SAID he is "optimistic" that negotiations will run smoothly; Floros said he is not "hopeful."

"I think we're now going to be going through it by item," Metzler said. "If we deal with each item we can make agreements on certain things and then do some more talking on others."

Floros said board bargainers will not agree to separate items because they want to take the contract proposal "as a package instead of piecemeal." He said: "I'm not hopeful because we are so far apart now. We feel that the teachers have not demonstrated a desire to be realistic in light of the district's financial position. They are up in the clouds and they won't come down. Until they do, negotiating is very difficult."

SHE'S A LITTLE off target, but she hardly seems to care. This was just one of the ways residents cooled themselves off yesterday.

Groups Ask That Schools Stay Open

The Elk Grove Township Board of Education last night heard appeals from several organizations who are protesting the board's decision to close school buildings to all outside groups.

Among those appearing were a Catholic priest and representatives of the Elk Grove Village Lions Club and the Boy Scouts plus several parent organizations.

More than 25 persons, most of them from groups affected by the decision made last month to close the building, attended the meeting.

Mrs. Eugene Schulz from the John Jay School PTO presented Board President Harold Harvey with petitions carrying 817 signatures asking the board to reconsider the decision and allow groups wishing to use the building to pay for custodial services.

Father James Shae of St. Julian Ema-yard Church in Elk Grove Village said his group has been paying for the use of Thomas Lively Junior High School for three years and said that in making the decision, "You've put 369 Catholic families on the west end of Elk Grove Village in a very precarious position. There aren't too many facilities that are available to us if we are denied the use of the public school facilities."

A LEADER FROM Boy Scout Troop 160 read a letter in which the troop protested their "eviction" from their meeting place.

A second letter from the board of directors of the Elk Grove Village Lions Club, was also read to the board; afterwards the Lions representative said, "the letter is very mild in tone compared to the mood of the Elk Grove Lions Club."

Board member Allen Sparks said the board had made its decision because of the bad financial condition of the building fund which pays for maintenance of the building and said all groups were excluded to prevent discrimination against organizations that could not afford to pay the cost of custodial service.

Sparks added, "I'm puzzled about why so many people are concerned about this inconvenience to some groups when we have made cuts in the education fund which are going to affect the education of every child in the district."

Des Plaines Postal Worker Is Charged

A Des Plaines postal worker was arrested by U.S. Postal Service inspectors last week and charged with stealing currency from mail he handled at a Des Plaines post office annex.

Arrested was Thomas C. Ziejewski, 20, of 1916 Hatherleigh Court, Mount Prospect. He was released on $1,000 bond following his arrest and is scheduled to appear for a preliminary examination this morning before Federal Magistrate Carl D. Sussman in Chicago.

Ziejewski was arrested June 30 while he was working at the Des Plaines North Annex postal facility, 1022 North Ave. He was charged with stealing $50 from an envelope addressed for deposit to a Des Plaines bank.

Postal Inspector William Wagner said an investigation was started several weeks ago when the inspector's office received complaints from postal customers.

Ziejewski, a postal clerk, has been employed with the postal service for almost two years.

Board Considers Water Rate Increase

A proposed rate hike of 20 cents per thousand gallons in the Mt. Prospect water rate was taken up last night by the village board.

At Herald press time, no decision on the proposal had been made.

The recommendation for the higher rate was made by Mayor Robert Teichert in a memorandum to trustees late last week.

That memorandum said the extra revenue generated by the higher rates would pay for a multi-faceted program to upgrade and expand the village's water system. Total cost of that program is estimated at $1.45 million.

Trustee Dan Ahern said, "The only way we (Ahern and Teichert) differ is in how to get the money. I see no reason why we can't include this in the village real estate tax rate."

TRUSTEE GEORGE Reiter said he agreed with what Ahern had said but went on to call for a board investigation of contract obligations with the Citizens Utility Company to supply water to that part of the village south of Golf Road.

Challenging Ahern's statement, Teichert said "The real estate tax has taken all it can." He said a rate hike would be more equitable than a general tax because under a rate hike people would pay only for what they use.

Trustee Richard Monroe said, "What I see is a continuation of a policy that precludes any water supply system besides wells." The water report, prepared earlier this year by the village engineering department, said that extra wells were needed. However it made no mention of any alternate water supply system such as buying water from Chicago or bringing it from Lake Michigan.

"I've got no objection however to voting for the hike," Monroe said. "I believe you should pay as you go."

X-Way Traffic Jams Are 'Worse Than Expected'

State highway officials yesterday renewed their pleas for motorists to find alternate routes to the Kennedy and Dan Ryan expressways, on which four-month construction projects have been started.

Traffic jams on both roads were "worse than expected," yesterday morning, according to a spokesman for the Illinois Division of Highways. The spokesman said apparently few commuters heeded advice to avoid the two routes.

Traffic on the Dan Ryan moved "surprisingly well" late yesterday afternoon, according to the Chicago Communications Center of the highway division. Conditions were expected to be worse today as construction activity expands.

The spokesman said southbound traffic moved fairly well on the Kennedy late yesterday afternoon to North Avenue. "When you reach North Avenue, it's like a brick wall," he said.

Westbound traffic on the Kennedy was reported backed up for over a mile at Des Plaines and River Roads late yesterday afternoon.

This Morning In Brief

The Nation

President Nixon has urged labor and management in the steel industry to write a new wage contract that would not price American steel out of the increasingly competitive world market. A management and Budget Director George Schultz said the President appealed "not only to their economic patriotism but beyond that to their sensitivity to their own self-interests." The present contract expires Aug. 1 and covers 450,000 workers.

Apollo 15 astronauts David R. Scott, Alfred M. Worden and James B. Irwin have started 20 days of launch site isolation in preparation for their flight to the moon July 26. They will, however, be the first moon landing crew that will not have to spend time in quarantine upon returning from the moon.

Louie (Satchmo) Armstrong died at his New York City home just two days after his 71st birthday. The death was unexpected although he had been near death in a hospital a few months ago. The former orphaned wail of the streets of New Orleans went on to become king of the jazz trumpet and won international acclaim.

Teamster sources in Miami Beach say the giant union plans to give imprisoned former president James Hoffa a $75,000 yearly pension and confer upon him the lifetime title of President Emeritus. There were reports, however, that Hoffa has asked for a lump settlement of $1 million. Hoffa resigned all union posts last month to improve his chances for parole from federal prison at Lewisburg, Pa., where he is serving 13 years for mail fraud and jury tampering.

The World

Henry Kissinger, President Nixon's assistant for national security affairs, arrived in India amid elaborate security precautions and demonstrations against American weapon shipments to Pakistan. Kissinger was to spend two days in talks with Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, her top ministers and other Indian leaders. Some of these have made blunt statements about the government's displeasure with the arms shipments to Pakistan.

An Argentine judge has turned an American Navy veteran and his Guatemalan girlfriend over to a five-judge panel to be tried for hijacking a Braniff jetliner from San Antonio, Tex., to Buenos Aires. No date was set for trial, but if convicted, air piracy carries a sentence of from 3 to 15 years. Still in question was whether the pair might be extradited to the United States or Mexico. The plane was hijacked Friday and it lasted 44 hours and took them 7,500 miles.

Board Postpones Action On Law To Limit Solicitors

Door to door salesmen, those pesky pitchmen who swarm through the suburbs by the hundreds, were almost run out of town on a legal rail last night by the trustees of Arlington Heights.

The trustees almost passed an ordinance creating a legal obstacle course for the salesmen but approval of the proposed law was deferred at the last minute for further review.

If approved and passed into law, the salesmen will encounter the following restrictions before selling their wares in the village:

— All solicitors must register with the Arlington Heights Police Department.

— Salesmen may work in the village only between 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

— Registered salesmen must have in their possession credentials issued by the police department.

— Salesmen must present to the village two character references to their "moral character, honesty and integrity" as well as their name and address, and their company's name and address.

— All salesmen must be fingerprinted by the Arlington Heights police for cross-checking with other police departments.

— Salesmen must pay the police department a $15 fee for their registration and credentials.

UNDER THE proposed law, solicitors who violate any provision of the ordinance will be subject to a $500 fine and revocation of the village license.

Action on the measure restricting solicitors in the village is the first step taken by the village under the new home rule provisions of the state constitution. Prior restraints of solicitors were prohibited under state statutes under the old constitution which was replaced on July 1.

The proposed ordinance was spurred by the board's legal committee. The committee of trustees strongly recommended adoption of the ordinance by the full board.

Pending final revision tonight by the legal committee, the new law may become effective in Arlington Heights at the next regularly scheduled board meeting, Monday, July 19.

The ordinance will undergo a final review tonight before presentation before the board in two weeks.

The Arlington Heights Plan Commission will meet at 8 tonight in the Municipal Building, 33 S. Arlington Heights Rd.

The legal committee of the Arlington Heights Village Board will meet at 8 tonight in the Municipal Building.

The budget committee of the Dist. 59 board of education will meet at 8 p.m. in the district's administration building, 2123 S. Arlington Heights Rd.

The Arlington Heights Park Board will meet at 7:30 p.m. at the park district's administrative offices, 660 N. Ridge Ave., Arlington Heights.

The Harper College board of education will meet at 8 p.m. at Harper College, located at Algonquin and Roselle Roads in Palatine.

The Dist. 21 board of education will meet at 8:15 p.m. in the school district's administrative offices, 999 W. Dundee Rd., Wheeling.

The Dist. 25 board of education will meet at 7:30 p.m. in the school district's administrative building, 301 W. South St., Arlington Heights.

SHE'S A LITTLE off target, but she hardly seems to care. This was just one of the ways residents cooled themselves off yesterday.

Environmental Control Bill Being Drafted

An ordinance providing an environmental control commission for Arlington Heights may be drafted tonight.

The legal committee of the Arlington Heights village board will meet at 8 p.m. in the Municipal Building, 33 S. Arlington Heights Rd.

James T. Ryan, chairman of the committee, said the meeting will be public, not open for public discussion as was the case when the committee met on June 28.

At that meeting, the committee devoted the entire meeting to public discussion, listening to recommendations and information from representatives of various antipollution groups.

Ryan said that information has been reviewed by committee members Frank Palmatier, and Ted Selinsky, and will be used to formulate a rough draft of an environmental control commission ordinance tonight.

He said the ordinance will then be recommended for approval and submitted for final adoption by the board of trustees on July 19.

X-Way Traffic Jams Are 'Worse Than Expected'

State highway officials yesterday renewed their pleas for motorists to find alternate routes to the Kennedy and Dan Ryan expressways, on which four-month construction projects have been started.

Traffic jams on both roads were "worse than expected," yesterday morning, according to a spokesman for the Illinois Division of Highways. The spokesman said apparently few commuters heeded advice to avoid the two routes.

Traffic on the Dan Ryan moved "surprisingly well" late yesterday afternoon, according to the Chicago Communications Center of the highway division. Conditions were expected to be worse today as construction activity expands.

The spokesman said southbound traffic moved fairly well on the Kennedy late yesterday afternoon to North Avenue. "When you reach North Avenue, it's like a brick wall," he said.

Westbound traffic on the Kennedy was reported backed up for over a mile at Des Plaines and River Roads late yesterday afternoon.

Physical Fitness Pentathlon Scheduled

This week is "Physical Fitness Week" in Arlington Heights in connection with Thursday's pentathlon to be held at Arlington High School.

A proclamation, signed by Village Pres. Jack Walsh, asks for "the support of parents and schools to encourage their children to participate" in the program.

The Quaker Oats Company physical fitness pentathlon will begin Thursday at 10 a.m. at the track at the high school, 502 W. Euclid St. Residents may register for the five-pronged program beginning at 9:15 a.m.

The program is sponsored by the Arlington Heights Park District and local Jewel, Jewel-Osco and Jewel-Turnstyle stores. No fee will be charged for the event.

The activity is open to boys and girls 6 through 18 years old and will include competition in walk and run, sit-ups, push-ups, standing long jump and ball throw.

Residents will compete against national standards set for the various age groups. If participants meet or exceed these standards, they will receive a certificate of achievement. The standards are set by the Quaker Oats Company Amateur Athletic Union.

Entry blanks for the pentathlon are available at local parks and Jewel stores.

Musical Splash Party Scheduled

A splash party featuring the contemporary musical group "The Orphanage" will be held Friday at Olympic Park's indoor swimming pool, 660 N. Ridge Ave., Arlington Heights.

Admission price will be $1.50 for the event which will begin at 7:45 p.m. and end at 10:45 p.m. The activity is sponsored by the Arlington Heights Park District.

One member of "The Orphanage" is Ray Herr, formerly of the "Ides of March."

Persons attending the event will not be admitted unless they bring bathing suits to wear.

Park District Sets Slumber Parties

Four slumber parties will be held from 7 p.m. to 7:30 a.m. at Recreation Park, 500 E. Miner St.; Frontier Park, Kennicott Drive and Palatine Road; Camelot Park, Brighton Place and Suffield Drive; and Pioneer Park, 500 S. Fernandez Ave.

The slumber parties are part of the park district's summer playground program. A similar program of slumber parties for boys will be held at the same locations July 30.

Registrations for children who wish to attend the slumber parties will be arranged through the playground programs conducted each week day at nine locations. Supervised activities are offered at no charge from 9 a.m. to noon and 1 to 4 p.m.

PLAYGROUND programs are conducted at the four parks plus Hasbrook Park, 333 W. Maude St.; Raven Park, Berkeley Drive and Highland Avenue; Patriot Park, 1815 N. Dale Ave.; Heritage Park, Highland Avenue and Victoria Lane; and Dryden Park, 700 S. Dryden Pl.

This Morning In Brief

The Nation

President Nixon has urged labor and management in the steel industry to write a new wage contract that would not price American steel out of the increasingly competitive world market. Management and Budget Director George Schultz said the President appealed "not only to their economic patriotism but beyond that to their sensitivity to their own self-interests." The present contract expires Aug. 1 and covers 450,000 workers.

Apollo 15 astronauts David R. Scott, Alfred M. Worden and James B. Irwin have started 20 days of launch site isolation in preparation for their flight to the moon July 26. Groups Ask That Schools Stay Open

The Elk Grove Township Board of Education last night heard appeals from several organizations who are protesting the board's decision to close school buildings to all outside groups.

Among those appearing were a Catholic priest and representatives of the Elk Grove Village Lions Club and the Boy Scouts plus several parent organizations.

More than 25 persons, most of them from groups affected by the decision made last month to close the building, attended the meeting.

Mrs. Eugene Schulz from the John Jay School PTO presented Board President Harold Harvey with petitions carrying 817 signatures asking the board to reconsider the decision and allow groups wishing to use the building to pay for custodial services.

Father James Shae of St. Julian Emar-yard Church in Elk Grove Village said his group has been paying for the use of Thomas Lively Junior High School for three years and said that in making the decision, "You've put 369 Catholic families on the west end of Elk Grove Village in a very precarious position. There aren't too many facilities that are available to us if we are denied the use of the public school facilities."

A LEADER FROM Boy Scout Troop 160 read a letter in which the troop protested their "eviction" from their meeting place.

A second letter from the board of directors of the Elk Grove Village Lions Club, was also read to the board; afterwards the Lions representative said, "the letter is very mild in tone compared to the mood of the Elk Grove Lions Club."

Board member Allen Sparks said the board had made its decision because of the bad financial condition of the building fund which pays for maintenance of the building and said all groups were excluded to prevent discrimination against organizations that could not afford to pay the cost of custodial service.

Sparks added, "I'm puzzled about why so many people are concerned about this inconvenience to some groups when we have made cuts in the education fund which are going to affect the education of every child in the district."

Students Tackle Consumer Problems

Insurance programs, investments, credit unions and other "weighty" adult matters are being tackled this summer by junior high school students in Dist. 21.

The students are enrolled in Louise Barner's consumer education classes in summer school at Jack London Junior High in Wheeling.

Mrs. Barner said the program is a "trial run" for the consumer education unit that will be taught to all grades in Dist. 21 in the next school year.

Passage of a state law that will make it mandatory to teach consumer education to high school students gave Dist. 21 the impetus to extend the concept to the lower grades as well, she said.

A curriculum committee worked all last year to develop the Dist. 21 program.

THE SUMMER school course, "... is designed to be as practical as possible, so the kids will learn what their parents have to go through and what they'll have to face some day. Most of them don't know anything about money, because they've never had to know," said Mrs. Barner, a social studies teacher in the district.

The class started by learning what money is and how it can be earned. Next they learned how to budget, how to save money and the importance of saving.

Wise buying habits, advertising methods, department store layaway plans and credit cards will be taken up next. The class will conclude with a study of insurance programs and investments.

Field trips round out the curriculum. Visits to local banks and department stores are planned.

Special projects, aimed at teaching practical application of budgeting, are a major part of the classroom curriculum.

In one exercise, the students were each given a $100 clothing allowance and asked to select an entire wardrobe from a department store catalog. Most students found that they couldn't keep to their budget.

IN ANOTHER exercise, they developed a budget for a typical American family of four. Figures on home mortgage payments and auto payments were supplied, but the students had to decide themselves how much a family would spend for food, transportation, clothing, recreation and medical expenses and how much would be put into savings.

"In all cases, the expenses were much lower than the average family really spends and savings were much higher. Most students had the family saving more than $1,000 each month, while a typical American family really saves only about $200 each month," Mrs. Barner commented. "I think this taught them a little about how much things really cost."

In yet another exercise, the students were asked to plan meals for a family of four, keeping to a food budget of $39 weekly.

The importance of saving is stressed in the course.

"Most of these kids have never saved for anything, except for candy or gum. I'm trying to stress saving for a purpose and the discipline it takes to save money," explained the instructor.

For the remainder of the four-week class, the students will be encouraged to save money for a bigger item — a new dress, baseball glove, or something similar.

IN AN EFFORT to keep better track of their money, the students are keeping ledgers, to note their income and expenditures.

Saving items other than money is also a part of this total "saving" theme. All the youngsters will bring items to class that they consider junk in a future class project. Then they'll transform the so-called junk into a usable household item.

Explained Mrs. Barner, "We're expanding the 'saving' idea to include savings of all types — saving money, saving the environment, saving time on the job and even saving junk."

Council Approves Widening Project On Prairie Avenue

by LEON SHURE

The Des Plaines City Council last night decided unanimously to begin plans to widen Prairie Avenue, a move considered essential to spur downtown Des Plaines redevelopment.

The council followed recommendations by its streets and traffic committee to approve the concept of widening Prairie and to authorize City Engineer Robert Bowen to draw up plans for council approval.

Officials of the Des Plaines Redevelopment Association have called the Prairie project essential for handling increased traffic needs which would be caused by proposed downtown changes.

Redevelopment officials have cited the Prairie project, purchase of Chicago and North Western Railway right-of-way land on Ellinwood for increased downtown parking, and higher parking rates as the three steps the city would have to take to clear the way for private redevelopment.

MAYOR HERBERT Behrel said an executive city council session would be held later this month to discuss acquisition of land needed for widening and realignment of Prairie.

The project would also include installation of a new storm sewer. City Engineer Bowen has estimated project would cost $500,000 funded from the city's share of state motor fuel taxes.

This project would widen Prairie, now a two-lane road, into a four-lane divided roadway, east from Gracefield Avenue. The project also would include connecting Ellinwood Street to Prairie and Thacker Street, east of Central School, 1526 Thacker St. This road would connect into River Road.

At Herald press time the city council had not yet approved an application for federal and state funds to construct a River Road overpass, a raised highway over Miner Street and the railroad tracks in downtown Des Plaines.

Downtown redevelopment officials in mid-June proposed construction for a $20,000,000 shopping mall and office complex bounded by Ellinwood, Lee Street, Prairie and Pearson Street.

THE MALL would be constructed in several stages and would consist of an enclosed two-story shopping area with two office buildings facing Ellinwood.

City officials met last week with Edward Benjamin, municipal bond consultant, who has proposed raising downtown parking rates from 5 cents to 10 cents an hour for shoppers and from 50 cents to 75 cents a day for commuters. He wants to increase parking rates to raise funds to pay for a $700,000 parking revenue bond issue, needed to finance construction of additional downtown parking space.

Mayor Can't Persuade District To Sell Site

Mayor Herbert Behrel Tuesday indicated he had been unable to persuade Des Plaines School Dist. 62 to sell the Thacker Street site proposed for senior citizen housing.

At his regular weekly press conference, Mayor Behrel said he met with Dist. 62 officials Saturday and they ruled out sale of the site across from Central School, 1526 Thacker, which Behrel had called ideal for a nine-story, 128 unit senior citizen apartment building.

The district said the land is not for sale, and they will keep it for future school district use, Behrel said. "There's not much we can do about it," Behrel said. He will not recommend further city action, he said.

Behrel also said that Victor Walchirk, director of the Cook County Housing Authority (CCHA) which would construct the apartment building, will meet with him July 13 to examine other possible sites. Walchirk has said that only site selection is holding back construction of a federally funded senior citizen apartment building.

Behrel said in mid-June that he would negotiate strongly with Dist. 62 to persuade them to change their minds about not selling the 1.9 acre site, now being used as a park.

Behrel supported use of the site because he considered it ideally close to downtown shopping and transportation, and of ideal size.

USE OF THE site was opposed by both second ward alderman, Kenneth Kehe and Robert Sherwood, who were defeated in their city council move June 21 to rule out use of the Thacker site.

Kehe and Sherwood said the Thacker site in a need should not be used because of a need for recreational space in the high population density area and because of community opposition to the site from community groups, including the Central School PTA and the Des Plaines League of Women Voters.

The school district had refused to sell the site, according to a letter in June to Mayor Behrel, because of the possibility of future need for future expansion.

City Atty. Robert DiLeonardi told the council at the June 21 meeting that the city could not use its powers of condemnation against the school district, another governmental body, according to state law.

Mayor Behrel and aldermen met June 28 to discuss other possible sites for the housing.

'Big Bend' Indians Can Stay — Awhile

An Indian group will be allowed to stay "temporarily" in a Des Plaines forest preserve while they seek adequate housing, according to Cook County officials.

The 75-member group, which began to occupy the Big Bend Lake site Friday night after a clash Thursday with Chicago Police when they were forcibly evicted from a Chicago lakefront site, will be allowed to stay temporarily because they are not interfering with others or causing a disturbance, according to officials, including George Dunne, Cook County Board president.

"We aren't going to kick them out, as long as they behave themselves," Arthur Janura, general superintendent of the Cook County Forest Preserve, told the Herald. The exact amount of time the Indians will be allowed to stay will be worked out in conferences between the Indians and the county, he said.

Although the Indians don't have a permit, they were given permission to camp at the site near Golf and River Road soon after they arrived, Janura said.

RICHARD SLOAN, head of the Cook County Forest Rangers, said he met twice Monday with Mike Chosa, 35, leader of the Indian group, the American Indian Village.

Chosa has told the Herald that the Indians want to be like other ethnic and class groups, which can live together in decent housing.

The Indian group occupied a site near Wrigley Field in Chicago last summer and occupied an apartment building this March in Chicago's Uptown community to protest living conditions of Chicago's American Indian population, they said.

In mid-June, the building burned. They then occupied a former Nike missile base at Belmont Harbor, on Chicago's north side.

Last Thursday, police and Indians clashed over removal of a fence around the former missile site. Twelve Indians were arrested and three policemen were injured in the eviction from the site, according to reports.

LATER, THE Indians were offered apartments in several housing projects in Chicago, including Cabrini Green, which they rejected as being unsafe and unfit.

They were also asked to leave the church they had gone to after the Belmont Harbor clash, they said.

They arrived at the site in Des Plaines around midnight Friday and set up a small site on the west end of Big Bend Lake.

They have received food and clothing contributions from Northwest suburban residents. They said most of their possessions were lost during the Belmont Harbor clash.

European Jazz Band Tour Near For Elk Grove High

Ten more days and the Elk Grove High School Jazz Band will be on its way to Europe.

On the afternoon of July 17 the 34 students including one alumna, and 15 adults will leave the Northwest suburbs for a 21-day tour of Holland, Austria, Germany, Switzerland, France, and England.

They will travel by jet, bus, steamer, and train while touring the six countries from July 17 to Aug. 8. Eleven concerts are scheduled.

The students are paying $675 each for the tour, arranged through Performing Arts Abroad, Kalamazoo, Mich., and America Sound Abroad, Crown Point, Ind.

The students have been preparing for the trip since it was proposed last year. Many of them have taken jobs this summer to defer some of the cost.

Rehearsals have picked up from two to three times a week in the evening hours in the band room at the Elk Grove Village school.

The band also will give a concert July 14 at Grant Wood School as part of the Elk Grove Park District's series of outdoor concerts.

The students are getting more anxious about the trip as the day of departure approaches, reported Douglas Peterson, band director.

He recalled that once the trip was just an idea until one of the fathers of a band member spearheaded a campaign to make the trip a reality.

"Dick Kincaid got the idea off the ground," said Peterson, "after there had been a lot of talk about it." Kincaid is the father of drummer Tom Kincaid.

"The feeling was we had a good product and wanted to show it off," said Peterson, adding that unfortunately, Dick Kincaid will not be making the tour.

Maine West Student Dies

A Maine West High School student was killed Monday night when the car she was riding in collided with another auto at River and Central roads, Des Plaines.

The student was identified as Susan Schutz, 16, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Schutz, 1376 Whitcomb Ave.

Des Plaines police said Miss Schutz was a passenger in a car driven by Richard L. Schmidt, 18, of 250 Drake Ln., Des Plaines, at the time of the accident.

Schmidt reportedly was traveling south on River Road and was attempting to turn left onto eastbound Central Road when the accident occurred, shortly before 8:30 p.m.

Police said the Schmidt vehicle turned in front of a car traveling north on River Road, driven by Geoffrey M. Lancaster, 19, of 218 N. Dalton St., Mundelein, and was struck in the passenger side.

The Schmidt vehicle apparently rolled onto its side and then righted itself, according to police. They said Schmidt was thrown from the vehicle and Miss Schutz was found over the steering wheel.

Both were taken to Lutheran General Hospital in fire department ambulances. Schmidt reportedly was treated and released and Miss Schutz was admitted to the intensive care unit at the hospital with internal injuries and cardiac arrest, according to police.

She was pronounced dead at approximately 11:30 p.m.

Schmidt was charged by police with failure to yield the right of way and is scheduled to appear in Des Plaines court Aug. 9.

The Nation

President Nixon has urged labor and management in the steel industry to write a new wage contract that would not price American steel out of the increasingly competitive world market. Management and Budget Director George Schultz said the President appealed "not only to their economic patriotism but beyond that to their sensitivity to their own self-interests." The present contract expires Aug. 1 and covers 450,000 workers.

Apollo 15 astronauts David R. Scott, Alfred M. Worden and James B. Irwin have started 20 days of launch site isolation in preparation for their flight to the moon July 28. They will, however, be the first moon landing crew that will not have to spend time in quarantine upon returning from the moon.

Louie (Satchmo) Armstrong died at his New York City home just two days after his 71st birthday. The death was unexpected although he had been near death in a hospital a few months ago. The former orphaned waif of the streets of New Orleans went on to become king of the jazz trumpet and won international acclaim.

Teamster sources in Miami Beach say the giant union plans to give imprisoned former president James Hoffa a $75,000 yearly pension and confer upon him the lifetime title of President Emeritus. There were reports, however, that Hoffa has asked for a lump settlement of $1 million. Hoffa resigned all union posts last month to improve his chances for parole from federal prison at Lewisburg, Pa., where he is serving 13 years for mail fraud and jury tampering.

The World

Henry Kissinger, President Nixon's assistant for national security affairs, arrived in India amid elaborate security precautions and demonstrations against American weapon shipments to Pakistan. Kissinger was to spend two days in talks with Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, her top ministers and other Indian leaders. Some of these have made blunt statements about the government's displeasure with the arms shipments to Pakistan.

An Argentine judge has turned an American Navy veteran and his Guatemalan girlfriend over to a five-judge panel to be tried for hijacking a Braniff jetliner from San Antonio, Tex., to Buenos Aires. No date was set for trial, but if convicted, air piracy carries a sentence of from 3 to 15 years. Still in question was whether the pair might be extradited to the United States or Mexico. The plane was hijacked Friday and it lasted 44 hours and took them 7,500 miles.

2 Charged In Theft Of Tires

Two men were arrested by Des Plaines police early Saturday morning and charged with the theft of almost $5,000 worth of tires from the Kelly-Springfield Co., 301 N. Third Ave.

Arrested were Fred Krase, 19, of 2801 N. Third St., Elmwood Park, and Tracy Stewart, 19, of 3957 N. Pacific, Chicago.

Des Plaines Patrolman Michael Banner said while he was on patrol he saw the two men in a car traveling southeast on Rand Road with no license plate light on the vehicle. Banner said he also saw new tires in the rear seat.

The patrolman said he stopped the car at River Road and Elk Boulevard and questioned them about the tires. He said the pair was transported to the station when they could not give a satisfactory answer to where they had obtained the tires.

While the men were being questioned, Patrolman Ken Randolph went to the tire company where he noticed a freshly worn path leading to an overgrown ditch behind the building.

Randolph reported finding 48 new tires hidden in the ditch, apparently stolen from a railroad box car near the building.

The two men were then charged with the burglary, police said.

Krase reportedly was released on $2,000 bond. Stewart was untal to post $5,000 bond and is being held in the Cook County jail.

The men appeared in court yesterday and requested a continuance until July 20.

Man Charged With Robbery

A 21-year-old Bensenville man has been charged by Des Plaines police with the armed robbery Friday of a woman in the parking lot of a Des Plaines shopping center.

Charged with the robbery was William James Howat, 21, of 19 N. Center St.

Des Plaines police said Howat, currently in custody on other charges in Mundelein, took a purse from Diana C. Notarfrancesco of Arlington Heights in the parking lot at Zayre, 727 W. Golf Rd.

Mrs. Notarfrancesco said the man pulled his car alongside her while she was crossing the lot, leaned over to the passenger side and said, "Put it in and I mean it." The woman said when she paused momentarily he ordered, "Your purse, throw it in," and pointed a pistol at her.

She said the man drove off with the purse, containing about $20 in cash, credit cards and identification.

WITNESSES AT the scene gave police a description of the car and the license plate number, which was sent to other area departments. The plates were reportedly stolen in Elmwood Park, police said.

Howat was apprehended by Mundelein police early Monday night when police recognized the car and plates and attempted to stop him.

Mundelein police said they chased Howat for 10 miles, at speeds in excess of 100 miles per hour, before he was captured. They said the man had credit cards and identification belonging to the Arlington Heights woman in his possession.

Youth Scheduled For Court In Chicago

The 17-year-old Barrington youth charged with the attempted murder of two Des Plaines policemen is scheduled to appear in court tomorrow at the Chicago Civic Center.

The youth, Christian L. Grove, of 23 Sunset Ln., Barrington, was arrested by Des Plaines police March 12 after he allegedly staged an armed robbery at the Professional Coin Mart, 652 Graceland Ave.

Police said that after Grove was taken into custody, he pulled a single-shot .22 caliber "pocketknife" gun from beneath several layers of clothing. Police said Grove fired the gun at the policemen after announcing, "You're dead."

The bullet reportedly was fired harmlessly into a wall in the police station as one of the policemen deflected Grove's arm as he was about to shoot.

Grove was indicted on charges of attempted murder and armed robbery June 15 and was arraigned June 22 before Judge Joseph A. Powers.

He is scheduled to appear tomorrow before Judge Louis A. Giliberto.

Groups Ask Board To 'Open Schools'

The Elk Grove Township Board of Education last night heard appeals from several organizations who are protesting the board's decision to close school buildings to all outside groups.

Among those appearing were a Catholic priest and representatives of the Elk Grove Village Lions Club and the Boy Scouts plus several parent organizations.

More than 25 persons, most of them from groups affected by the decision made last month to close the building, attended the meeting.

Mrs. Eugene Schulz from the John Jay School PTO presented Board President Harold Harvey with petitions carrying 817 signatures asking the board to reconsider the decision and allow groups wishing to use the building to pay for custodial services.

Father James Shae of St. Julian Ema-yard Church in Elk Grove Village said his group has been paying for the use of Thomas Lively Junior High School for three years and said that in making the decision, "You've put 369 Catholic families on the west end of Elk Grove Village in a very precarious position. There aren't too many facilities that are available to us if we are denied the use of the

Tollway-Rte. 53 Nearly Set

The eastern half of a reconstruction project on the Northwest Tollway-Route 53 interchange is expected to be completed by the first week in August, according to a tollway official.

Mahmood Shahangian, an assistant to field engineer Brian Kippel, reported Friday the next phase will be to complete improvements west of the interchange.

A key point in the project is to relocate toll plazas to the west. They have been located in four separate locations on the cloverleaf. The new locations will handle the same traffic; that is, westbound traffic entering the tollway and eastbound traffic leaving it.

The same pattern of toll collections will remain in effect when the project is completed. In other words, commuters to and from Chicago will continue to pay only at a plaza located on the Tollway north of O'Hare International Airport.

Officials of the State Toll Highway Authority stressed the new interchange would not hike the existing tolls.

However, in a press release from the authority, it reported its board "is expected to consider an adjustment of the ramp toll rate to equalize the trip cost for motorists using both facilities" after Interstate 90 is completed.

SHAHANGIAN said the project is behind schedule, but that from 50 to 60 per cent of the western half of the improvement should be completed by the end of the year.

Route 53, the divided and limited access highway serving Rolling Meadows, Palatine and Arlington Heights, will be connected in the future with Interstate 90 from Elmhurst. The state highway department is responsible for that project, including widening the Route 53 bridge over the tollway.

Shahangian was unable to give motorists any specific advice about avoiding construction work on the project, as he indicated that new detours for traffic are frequently changed.

A LEADER FROM Boy Scout Troop 160 read a letter in which the troop protested their "eviction" from their meeting place.

A second letter from the board of directors of the Elk Grove Village Lions Club, was also read to the board; afterwards the Lions representative said, "the letter is very mild in tone compared to the mood of the Elk Grove Lions Club."

Board member Allen Sparks said the board had made its decision because of the bad financial condition of the building fund which pays for maintenance of the building and said all groups were excluded to prevent discrimination against organizations that could not afford to pay the cost of custodial service.

Sparks added, "I'm puzzled about why so many people are concerned about this inconvenience to some groups when we have made cuts in the education fund which are going to affect the education of every child in the district."

ALL WAS NOT SMILES on the VFW Military Order of the Cooties float in the Fourth of July Parade Monday afternoon. Maybe it was the sight of year old Rusty Graham, 866 Howard St., to tears. The crowd was estimated at 20,000.

Rain Fails To Dampen The Weekend

by DOROTHY OLIVER

The crowd was small and soggy — small compared to the estimated 25,000 who were to attend the annual Fourth of July fireworks display at Lake Opeka, and soggy due to a steady drizzle that fell in Des Plaines Sunday night.

"It was impossible to estimate the size of the crowd because many people remained in their cars or stood under the eaves of surrounding homes during the display," said C. W. "Tony" Kaitschuck, executive director of the Des Plaines Chamber of Commerce and Industry and coordinator of the Fourth of July Weekend Chamber sponsored activities.

Hundreds of spectators packed up their belongings and headed for home as the sprinkle turned into a steady rain. Yet many chose to remain — some who had arrived as early as 4 p.m. with a picnic dinner, ready to enjoy the twilight concert by the Maine West High School Summer Band and the fireworks.

MR. AND MRS. Leo Price and their children — Chip, Quinn, Ed and Ann — decided they were already wet, so why not stay. And stay they did — for an hour and 15 minutes before the first lights burst in the air.

Between 12 and 15 test shots were fired to test the atmosphere before the real show began. The crowd roared its approval with applause, singing and beeping horns.

Ground displays highlighted the show beginning with a huge "welcome" sign, and finishing with the spectacular flag display — complete with rockets red glare and bombs bursting in air.

"The crowd response was very good," Kaitschuck said. "The week before the Fourth we had over 150 phone calls in the Chamber office asking when the fireworks would be held so people could plan family parties around them. We couldn't disappoint those people."

A TOTAL OF 112 units wound their way from Oak Leaf Shopping center through downtown Des Plaines for the annual Chamber parade Monday afternoon. Everything went smoothly this year, according to Kaitschuck, and all units wound up in the right place at the right time.

Final judging was made from a reviewing stand near Lee and Thacker Streets where city and parade officials congregated. Judging the entries were Austin J. Rohman and O. D. Swanson, past presidents of the Chamber, Mrs. Edward Boch and Mrs. Roger Speigler.

Ribbon winners included: Antique Cars entered by clubs and organizations — Des Plaines Golden Agers, first place; Maine Township Republicans Car 3, second place; Des Plaines Soroptimists Club, third place; John Minerick, fourth place. Non-church floats — Des Plaines Moose Lodge, first place; Paddock Publication, Des Plaines Herald, second place; YMCA Indian Guides, third place. Floats entered by churches — St. Stephen's Catholic Church, first place; St. Mary's Catholic Church, second place; Christ Evangelical and Reformed Church, third place.

MARCHING UNITS — Algonquin Order of the Arrow Marchers, first place; Des Plaines park district Golden Girls, second place; Des Plaines Kiwanis clowns, third place. Entries in the antique car group — Angelo Falluca of Skokie, first place; Harold Taylor of Skokie, second place; Emery Gottshall of Des Plaines, third place.

Judging for the Chamber of Commerce

Trophy were Mrs. Arlene Kaitschuck, Mrs. Helen Palangio and Mr. and Mrs. Herman Vito. The trophy went to the Racine Scouts of Racine, Wis.

The drum and bugle corps which participated in the parade went on to compete in the evening in the "Youth on Parade" competition sponsored by the Des Plaines Vanguards. The Vanguards gave a demonstration in precision marching during the program.

THE RACINE KILTIES took first place with the New Orleans Stardusters a very close second. Third place went to the Thunderbolts of North Milwaukee, Wis. and fourth to the Racine Scouts of Racine, Wis. The Guardsmen of Mount Prospect came in fifth with the Catholic Daughters of Butler, Pa. finishing in sixth place.

Kaitschuck mentioned that "special thanks" should go to Andy Carpinelli of the Vanguards Drum and Bugle Corps for spending 2½ days rounding up corps from across the country for the parade and competition. Between five and six thousand people attended the Vanguard show.

Earlier in the weekend, Ray Grothe, 2141 Webster Ln., Des Plaines, swept the Des Plaines Park District fishing competition at Lake Opeka. Thirteen-year-old Ray used real and artificial worms to bring in more than 200 fish from the lake. He won first place for "biggest fish" and "most fish" caught.

Taking second place for "biggest fish" was Dave Geist, 2041 Eastview, Des Plaines. Mike Olson, 1871 Stockton, won second place for "most fish."

Sportsman's Notebook

FINDING A PUBLIC campground that provides something to do for everyone in a family seems like an almost impossible task. Yet there seems to be less difficulty in making a successful selection in Wisconsin.

This may seem like a blatant commercial for the state of Wisconsin, yet after seven or eight years of camping in that state, each new campground we visit is more beautiful, better maintained, cleaner, and more fun than the last one.

But then the choice up there is so broad that with a little careful planning, it's hard to miss. We have a few basic requirements.

1st: Since we always trailer the boat on camping trips, we look for a campground on some body of water. Right away, then, we have swimming, water skiing, fishing and boat touring to look forward to.

2nd: Since we rarely spend less than a week on any single trip, we avoid the "primitive" campgrounds that do not provide drinking water, picnic tables and the other creature comforts.

3rd: We prefer a small capacity campground near a small town. Most campers generally assume that a small campground will fill quickly and they do on weekends, but if you move in on Sunday afternoon or Monday, you can almost always find a near-perfect campsite. The smaller capacity of the campgrounds also attracts less tourist traffic and the citizens of the neighboring town are not quite so "fed-up" with a continuous flow of transients. Thus they are easier to get along with and the local merchants tend to be far more reasonable to do business with.

The two campgrounds we have most recently visited fill these requirements quite admirably.

Wyalusing State Park is perched on a high bluff that overlooks the confluence of the Wisconsin and the Mississippi Rivers just south of the town of Prairie du Chien. The area has an interesting history and an immensely beautiful presence.

Early arriving campers should look for a campsite right out on the crest of the bluff, where from 530 feet above the valley you can see both of the rivers and the backwaters they form as they join.

There is an unfortunate part of this view, but if you're willing to overlook it, you can spend hours just "sittin' and starin'." The Wisconsin river, as it flows below the bluff, is a tepid brown in color and not at all enticing from that distance. But the cause of the color is due mostly to the red clay of the banks and river bottoms that the river has flowed thru on its southwestern course from the Lake Wisconsin-Castle Rock-Petenwell flowages. The Kickapoo River, too, makes its contribution of red-brown sediment as it joins the Wisconsin just east of its mouth.

The park itself is dissected by erosion into high wooded hills and deep wooded valleys. Trails wind along the valley sides, and there are caves, small waterfalls and cool springs that can make a hiking trip a nature-lover's delight.

In the main channel of the Mississippi River, we caught walleyes, lying just above and below the wing dams which jut out from the river banks to contain the flow of the water. In the backwaters at the union of the two rivers are largemouth bass and plenty of panfish.

The best bait, right now, for walleyes and northern pike are willow-cats, a tiny, shiny catfish minnow that you fish on the business end of a river-rig. The heavy bell sinker on the bottom of the rig keeps the bait from taking off downstream in the swift water around the dams. About 24 inches above that is a three-way swivel with one end tied to the line and the back eye tied to another 24 inches of monofilament and the hooked minnow.

The bass in the backwaters are a little more difficult to take, because they are in heavy weed beds. The children, in their simple, unsophisticated way, solved the problem quite easily. They just hooked a big nite crawler on a Lindy Rig, cast into the weeds and sat tight, waiting for the bass to find the bait.

Northern pike offer less of a problem in these weedy backwaters, since they still are suckers for a Johnson Silver Minnow on which you impale a frog pork chunk to make the hook weedless. Cast this right into the floating weeds and it will stay out of trouble and raise an occasional pike.

North of Wyalusing near the town of Trempealeau is Perrot State Park. Here we were able to secure a campsite on the Trempealeau river that flows into the Mississippi river. It was a bright, sunny site, by the way, one that had been studiously avoided by the other campers already in residence. On our first night at the site, there was a driving rain accompanied by gale force winds that blew down power lines in the city of LaCrosse south of us. By noon the following day, the other campers were still trying to dry out tents and sleeping bags while we relaxed, warm and dry, in the midday sun.

The fishing is different, if not better, at this farther-north campgrounds. The Mississippi river is low right now in these upper reaches, and the fish are at their mid-summer depths. So we were able to break out the Spoonplugs and take our limit of smallish walleyes on two consecutive days. In between trolling for walleyes, we fished the Trempealeau river bay, within "sitting distance" of our campsite, and caught all we wanted in the way of bluegills and fat, healthy, tasty, yellow bullheads. For those who prefer to stillfish, there are islands aplenty with stumps rising out of the water at the shoreline, holding big catfish at their bases. Crappie fishing had been good only a few days before our arrival, but we took only a handful in four days of trying for them.

A river has always held a strange fascination for me, and I never tire of just cruising, stopping occasionally at a likely looking island or sandbar for a swim and a nap in the sun.

But, since it is a river, the bottom changes almost constantly, and one is well advised not to run at anything approaching full-speed in a boat of any size. The windmills, too, are a constant hazard for the unwary.

Campsites at Wyalusing cost $2.50 per night. At Perrot it is $2.75 per night. Both have trailer dumping stations and Perrot has restrooms with showers and hot water.

Both locations, as are all Wisconsin campgrounds, are well patrolled by park rangers day and night and no one is admitted in after 11 p.m. except campers. There are concession stands at both, selling ice, soft drinks and a few groceries, snacks and souvenirs. But don't depend on concession stands for your main supplies. Their stock is very limited and the hours they keep are highly subject to daily change, depending on whether the young people who attend them have succumbed to the sun and the water themselves.

Brochures are available on both parks. Write: Department of Natural Resources, State Parks, Madison, Wis., 53701.

tional Bank. A low throw pulled Leer off the bag and permitted Werhane to reach first base safely. First National Bank won the contest 7-5 but it did not prevent Bantam from winning the first half championship of the American League with a 4-4 record.

Santa Fe Speedway Hosts 12-Event Card Wednesday

Jimmy Rice of Palo Alto, Calif., the number two motorcycle rider in the nation last year, leads a field of more than 65 top cyclists as Santa Fe Speedway hosts another star-studded American Motorcycle Association-sanctioned program this Wednesday night, July 7.

Spotlighting the 12-event card will be a 10-lap feature race on the quarter-mile clay oval. The cycles fly off the starting line at 8:30 p.m. with time trials coming one-half hour before racetime.

Rice, who last year came very close to being the Grand National Champion, mastered Santa Fe Speedway's very competitive field last week in winning the feature, trophy dash, a heat and setting fast time. Other riders who must be reckoned with include Gary Scott, Baldwin Park, Calif.; Dave Sehl, Atlanta, Ga.; Charlie Chapple, Flint, Mich.; Billy O'Brien, Waukegan, Ill.; Ken Roberts, Redwood City, Calif.; and Roger Reiman, Kewanee, Ill.

The expected battle between Rice and Scott for Santa Fe supremacy has motorcycle fans buzzing with enthusiasm. In their three feature event meeting thus far, Scott took the first two and Rice endured last week although Scott fell from his bike and had to leave the main event. Roberts and Sehl also have been quite impressive in recent tussles.

Santa Fe Speedway is located at 91st and Wolf Road approximately 20 minutes from downtown Chicago via the Stevenson Expressway.

THIS IS A SWELL SHIP
FOR THE SKIPPER
BUT A HELL SHIP
FOR THE CREW

by MARY B. GOOD

Edna and Lee Hoehle of Arlington Heights are the modern day counterparts of Tom Sawyer and Becky Thatcher — with a 33-foot cabin cruiser instead of a raft.

Their days on the water are filled with challenge and adventure.

Like the time they rescued a stalled houseboat from the destructive path of a barge.

Or the time they were in a Mississippi River flood, and a submerged telephone pole surfaced in churning water to bend a prop.

Or the time they towed to safety an over-loaded boat filled with intoxicated party-goers, a violation that would have cost the foolhardy party a $500 to $1000 fine if the Coast Guard had ticketed them.

THE HOEHLES ARE members of the Coast Guard Auxiliary. Joining two years ago, they lost no time in volunteering for "sea duty." Lee is public education officer for their flotilla (area group), and Edna is division secretary (regional group). The Auxiliary is not to be confused with the U. S. Coast Guard. The Auxiliary is the civilian arm of the military unit. Auxiliaries give assistance to boaters; they are not law enforcement officers.

The group has its social functions — regattas, the Commodore's Ball, etc., but the emphasis is on education and promoting safety. Courtesy boat inspections by the Auxiliary, for example, prevent a multitude of boating mishaps.

This year the Hoehles are going operational. This means that their boat will be used for patrol on the Illinois River, assisting in search rescue and flood missions. Their official job will be to assist people imperiled on the water.

"THE DIFFERENCE between anxiety and full enjoyment of boating is education," Edna said. "Security means knowing how to pilot in a storm, what to do if you run out of gas, if a prop breaks, how to fix a motor, what to do if someone aboard gets 'seasick'."

Edna is in the process of getting her instructor's badge so she and her husband can teach seamanship as a team. This is only one of the many free courses offered by the Coast Guard in night school programs.

Others are rules of the road, legal responsibilities, marlin spike seamanship (knot tying), care of the lines, etc.

The Hoehles' lapstrake hull cruiser is powered by twin inboard engines with a total of 460 horsepower. Their home on the water includes a forward stateroom, dinette, a "head" (bathroom), a galley (kitchen), a lounge and a large aft deck (back porch).

GUESTS FIND the Hoehles' hospitality runs to Burgundy stew, spaghetti sauce with wine, hamburger cookouts, homemade muffins, rolls and cakes. An invitation to board always includes a quickie course in boatmanship — how to Flemish a line, where to find a working station.

Their boat, "The Panacea," is docked at Seneca, Ill., a beautiful part of Illinois rich in Indian lore. "Where life rolls on," Edna said, "no pushing, and we get away from the rat race."

Aweigh They Go

Safe Waters Their Goal

ON PATROL. The sight of the Coast Guard Safety Patrol is a welcome relief to vessels in distress. Art Remus, left, division captain, is the lookout, while Lee Hoehle pilots the craft and his wife, Edna, gets stationed to dock. The Hoehles are long-time Arlington Heights residents. Remus lives in Bensenville.

Speaking Of...

Today's Best Cellars

by KAY MARSH

Can you guess the highest price ever paid for a bottle of wine? Would you say $100? $1,000? Guess again! At a wine auction held in San Francisco in May, Laurence Bender, a Boston wine merchant, paid $5,000 for a bottle of rare, old French wine. Mr. Bender's $5,000 bought him 24 ounces of 1848 vintage Chateau Lafite, a red Bordeaux, from the personal cellars of the Rothschild family of France.

This reportedly is the highest price ever paid for a bottle of wine anywhere in the world. Since only three bottles of the 1848 Lafite are known to still exist in the world, it's highly unlikely that you or I will ever sample it, even if we could afford more than $100 for a half-ounce taste.

Nor would we be apt to appreciate it. True connoisseurship requires time, talent and money. It takes a dedicated apprenticeship to master the rituals of choosing the right wines from the right vines, not to mention what goes with what and at what temperature and in what glasses it should be served. The whole thing gets so complicated that most of us just give up, or else serve a safe sherry or champagne.

NEVERTHELESS, more and more Americans are becoming more and more interested in wines. Investing in wines is a popular business activity, and often a highly rewarding one if you don't drink up the profits. Wine-tasting parties are more common than Tupperware affairs in many areas. Some authorities even say that wine has become a major status symbol for the seventies.

That little old wine maker may also be you or your neighbor, as more and more take up the hobby. While most amateurs concentrate on conventional types, others experiment with such conversation pieces as chocolate-flavored wine or old-fashioned dandelion wine. (There is, by the way, a recipe for the latter in Joan Ransom Shortney's book, "How to Live on Nothing.")

But liberation has come to the vineyards, too. Among the fastest selling wines today are the fruit-flavored "pop" wines — served in paper cups if you like, and even "on the rocks." To true wine-lovers, they're just "soda pop with alcohol" and no connoisseur would try or buy one. But they're popular with the young, and some not-so-young. Both groups together are pushing sales to an estimated $75 million a year. Pop wines offer a sweet fruit flavor that appeals to unsophisticated palates, plus a relatively low alcoholic content (usually around 11 percent).

PERHAPS THEIR GREATEST attraction is the minimal price. An ad in our local college paper lists four wine specials for this week: Bali Hai at 89 cents; Boone's Farm Apple Wine at 85 cents; Red, White and Pagan Pink Ripple Wine at 89 cents; and Cold Bear Wine ("Incredibly Good - Serve Incredibly Cold") at 96 cents. Among several other popular flavors are Zapple (apple), Spanada (grape) and Ripple (grape wine and tropical fruits).

If pop wines are too unsophisticated for you but you still like the idea of a sweet cooler, try Sangria, which they serve in Spain much like our iced tea. Here's one easy recipe: Combine a fifth of dry red wine with juice of one orange, juice of half a lemon and one package of frozen peaches (with syrup). Let stand until peaches defrost. Pour into a tall pitcher. Add ice cubes, fill pitcher with soda and stir. Garnish with a spiral of orange peel.

THE QUOTE BOARD. Someone has defined the true wine lover as a man who, when invited out for an evening of wine, women and song, asks what kind of wine. And probably what vintage year.

HUSBAND AND WIFE discuss strategic points of boat safety inspection, one of the vital functions of the Coast Guard Auxiliary. Lights, fire extinguishers and life preservers are three "musts" for every motor boat on the water, large or small. Courtesy inspections are part of the Hoehles' activities. They make safety an integral part of boating fun.

AHOY MATEY! Edna Hoehle (hail ee) prepares to tie up in the boat's slip. Mrs. Hoehle is division secretary with the Coast Guard Auxiliary, the second highest position to which a woman can aspire in the group.

Dull Play Hampers Debut

Arlington Park Theatre An Asset

THROUGH THE ARCH. Guests arrive at Arlington Park Theatre immediately adjacent to Arlington Park Towers.

by GENIE CAMPBELL

There is nothing small time about the new Arlington Park Theatre except the current play itself.

Many Chicago theatergoers weren't even quite sure where they were going when they headed out to Arlington Heights for the opening of "Relatively Speaking." They quickly learned, however, that it really is possible to grow chandeliers in the suburbs.

Perhaps the most memorable part of last week's premiere was watching the various members of the audience walk through the gigantic arches into the lobby of the very plush theater. Expressions mirrored surprise.

All this right in the middle of suburbia? But what an advantage. Elegance and a great deal of sophistication combined with more than enough parking space... that's free.

Where else can you find legitimate theater complete with fountains, terrace and lots of red carpeting right next to a race track?

With the theater operational and esthetically very pleasing, it was an extreme disappointment when the performance did not live up to its surroundings. While not a disaster, the comedy "Relatively Speaking," is tedious enough to put some to sleep and force others to sneak out during intermission. Much of the laughter is simply an outcome of boredom.

Most important, it is not the kind of performance necessary to spontaneously ignite enthusiasm for a new theater.

But there is no way to cover up the fact that Douglas Seale, the director, refused to accept any responsibility for the production, saying he found it impossible to work with Joan Fontaine.

The one deserving a red feather in his cap is Ian Martin, the only funny bone of the performance. I can't imagine Ray Milland playing the role any better.

When Martin is on stage, the audience pays attention. Needless to say, he is the only one to draw applause. Even more amusing than his lines are Martin's animated expressions and unforgettable "Mr. Magoo" type laugh.

Joan Fontaine, the original star of the show, is memorable only in scenes opposite Ian Martin, who acts as a crutch for whoever is on stage.

"Relatively Speaking," by Alan Ayckbourn is simply a comedy of errors. A young man believes he is meeting his fiancée's father who is in reality, her ex-lover. Meanwhile the father thinks the young man is having an affair with his wife and so on.

The Arlington Park Theatre is a definite asset to the area, and as far as theater-in-the-round goes, the construction is perfect. Perhaps in August, a different play will do the new theater justice.

Birth Notes

No Names Like These

Ordinary names just don't strike the fancy of Mr. and Mrs. Erik A. Helgesen, 876 Woodlawn Ave., Des Plaines. Rather than pouring over names in baby books for an unusual one, the Helgesens make up their own.

The result is three children with "one-of-a-kind" names: D'Anne, 5; Kire, (the reverse spelling of his father's name) 18 months; and newly born Anjanette Jolie. Anjanette was born June 17 at Lutheran General Hospital and weighed 7 pounds 4 ounces. Hubert Thorn of Des Plaines is grandfather to the children.

Daniel Wayne Dopkins is the first child of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Dopkins, 10389 Dearlove Rd., Des Plaines. The 9 pound 6 ounce boy arrived June 15 at Lutheran General Hospital.

Brian Paul Major is a new grandchild for Mrs. Ann Bien of Des Plaines and the first child for Mr. and Mrs. Roger W. Major of Mount Prospect. June 24 will be the birthday for the 9 pound 4 ounce baby who was born at Northwest Community Hospital. Mr. and Mrs. Richard Bruce of Tennessee are also grandparents.

William Matula is the new arrival at 1239 Harding, Des Plaines. Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Matula are the proud parents of 9 pound 5/4 ounce Eric who was born June 17 at Lutheran General Hospital.

Crib Death Conference

The first National Parent-Medical Conference on the Sudden Infant Death Syndrome (SIDS) will be held at Chicago's Marriott Motor Inn Friday and Saturday, July 9 and 10.

The conference, sponsored by the National Foundation for Sudden Infant Death, Inc., will include sessions on research done on SIDS, (sometimes referred to as "Crib Death"), the No. 1 cause of baby death in the country after the first week of life.

Up to 15,000 babies a year under the age of seven months die from SIDS — a mysterious, seemingly noncontagious disease that kills infants in their sleep.

The cause of SIDS is unknown.

One of the tragedies of SIDS is that parents often blame themselves or a babysitter for the death of the child. Yet, research indicates that SIDS cannot be predicted and — without knowing the cause — it cannot be prevented.

THE CHICAGO SIDS parent-medical conference will bring together physicians, researchers, professional organizations and concerned parents.

The National Foundation for Sudden Infant Death, Inc., with offices in New York City and 14 chapters in the United States including Chicago area, offers help to parents who have lost a child through SIDS. It also promotes SIDS research and community-level SIDS education programs and maintains liaison with other groups and individuals concerned about SIDS.

The Home Line

by Dorothy Ritz

We've been bombarded by letters criticizing the advice given a reader who wanted to know how to get stains out of baby garments. Yes, we said soaking in an enzyme-active laundry product would do the trick. Recommending anything with a high phosphate content is something less than popular in this era of ecology-minded citizens. That's fine and understandable. The amazing thing, however, is the insistence that if biodegradables are used, the problems would be solved. But all detergents and enzyme-active products are now biodegradable — and have been for at least five years. The phosphate content is still there.

Until the manufacturers come up with some provable, workable substitute, we're all stymied. For the time being, soaking in a soap flakes solution (providing you can find it in the stores) will do much to get rid of stains. However, it still won't do the job as well as the more powerful detergents.

Dear Dorothy: It must be the kind of water M.D.F. uses that produces clear ice cubes. I tried hot water out of the tap. I tried boiling water — and let the trays sit for eight minutes before putting in the refrigerator. Just as cloudy as ever. — Grace A.

Dear Dorothy: Is there any rule about how much salt one should add to one pound of ground meat? — Isobel Honet.

Don't know whether this amount is absolute or not, but most recipes recommend one teaspoon salt to one pound of ground meat.

Dear Dorothy: Old sponges never die! They become stuffing for tots' tubbie, terrycloth toys. — Maggie.

Dear Dorothy: I've always thought it necessary to wax vinyl floors if for no other reason than to keep them from getting scratched and the surface from showing wear. However, I keep hearing that waxing is old-fashioned and is not as necessary with the new vinyl coverings being pushed now. Who is right? — Virginia T.

The great majority of vinyl floor coverings do, indeed, need some kind of wax or vinyl dressing. There are some new types of vinyl to which wax won't even stick. If you are interested in this new type, make it a point to buy from a reputable firm and follow the company's advice on whatever treatment the floor covering needs. Some people have reported being suckered by high pressure sales people in less than quality stores.

Dear Dorothy: When a recipe calls for raisins, how do you keep them from falling to the bottom? Also, how do you spread the raisins evenly in the batter? Mrs. William C.

When a batter is thin, raisins invariably will sink to the bottom. Ordinarily with regular batter, just reserving a little of the flour called for in the recipe and mixing this with the raisins, then gently spreading them in place will keep them there. Another method is to spoon in some batter, then a layer of raisins, continuing this way until everything is in.

Dear Dorothy: My husband works at night so must sleep in the daytime. But the bedroom is right above the kitchen and he is often disturbed by the appliances being used. How can we eliminate some of the noise? — Mrs. W. T.

Ceiling tiles in the kitchen can absorb much of the noise. And if the bedroom isn't already carpeted, that would screen out still more.
